Praises Americans for support

RIYADH, Oct. 29 (SPA) - Minister of Defeose and Aviation Prince Sultan said here in a press conference Thursday that the people of Saudi Arabia do not think of war. He reiterated that their great desire is to see a lasting and real peace prevail in the Middle East so that its peoples are able to achieve development and build a prosperous society.

Before the conference began, Prince Sultan read a statement in which he said that approval of the delivery of AWACS aircraft and additional accessories for F-15 fighters has been obtained on honorable terms in

OPEC agrees on

unified $34 price

GENEVA, Oct. 29 (AFP) — The 13 member countries of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Thursday agreed on new ceiling and floor prices. Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al

Sahah said the floor price would be $34 a harrel and the ceiling $38. OPEC later issued a one-and-a-half-page communique announcing the new $34 base price, saying the new prices will take effect no later than

OPEC ministers also decided to freeze the price of oil until the end of 1982, the Kuwaiti minister announced.

The oil exporters' agreement came during their third attempt this year to end major price competition within OPEC. Two previous summits at Geneva resulted in failure. Ohservers noted that a massive oil glut had depressed the world market and had hrought the pricing strategies of individual nations closer together, facilitating an agreement this

The accord ends 30 months of anarchic prices within the organization. Members were charging widely differing prices for similar grades of oil. The price range is now much narrower with just a $4 differential instead of the previous, $32 to $41 spread.

Under the agreement, Saudi Arabia will raise its prices from $32 to $34 a barrel, a 6.25 percent increase. Saudi Arabia exports more oil than any other country in the world.

The oil ministers struck the deal after private talks among delegations here, apparently resolving past disagreements over the touchy question of premiums. These are charged by some producers in addition to posted prices, to account for quality differences and for proximity to major markets. The premium question played a role in scuttling the two previous attempts at price agree-

U.S. ranks first in energy output

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP) - The United States led the world in energy productlon during 1980, followed by the Soviet Union and Saudi Arabia, the U.S. Encrgy Department has said.

A report issued by the department's energy information administration Wednesday said U.S. energy production totaled 64.8 quardrillion British thermal units, compared to 54.5 quadrillion BTU's for the Soviet Union. The report also noted that oorth American led the world in consumption of crude oil, using 33 percent of the world total, and natural gas, using 44 percent, in 1979, the latest year for which figures were available. Eastern Europe led in coal consumption with 31 percent of the total, the report sald.

Covered in the report on 1980 energy production were all sources of energy, including not only resources such as oil and natural gas but hydroelectric production and nuclear power. Saudi Arahia, whose production included only crude oil and other natural products, produced 22.1 quadrillion BTU's China was fourth in production, with 20.6 quadrillion BTUs.

An earlier report by the department noted that U.S. crude oil production was third in the world in 1980, behind the U.S.S.R. and Saudi Arabia, Soviet production was 11.7 million barrels a day, the Kingdom's was 9.9. million barrels a day, and the United States' was 8.6 million harrels a day, the report said.

Cool to criticism

Reagan masterminded deal

By Tod Robberson Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 - Wednesday's Senate vote on the AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia was a true cliffhanger for the public and the press, but administration sources told Arab News that they knew long in advance bow the vote would turn out.

The only surprise in the voting came from Senator Edward Zorinsky, who remained uncommitted even after meeting with President Ronald Reagan Wednesday morning. All of the other votes were planned days or even weeks in advance, and Reagan knew what the final outcome would be, one State Department source said.

Reagan's strategy was to make it appear as if he were struggling to get the needed votes, and although many of the "late converts" publicly voiced opposition to the sale only days before the vote, they privately had told the president that be could expect their support when the final vote came.

Reagan wanted to give the public appearance that his powers of persuasion and his last-minute lohbying efforts could turn around even the most unmovable opposition. But in reality, that opposition was never as strong as it had appeared. The Washingtoobased Kiplinger Letter bad predicted three weeks ago what the final vote in the Senate

But even under such criticism, Reagan continued his nonchalant attitude and his non-public lobbying effort. The White House bas insisted all along that Reagan never tried to bargain or bribe senators with political support if they would support the AWACS sale. The 5 p.m. vote in the bushed Senate chamber, before a packed gallery of visitors, climaxed a high-power, last-minute lobbying blitz by President Reagan and gave him a resounding victory on his first major foreign policy initiative.

After the vote the Seoate's Republican leadership, led by Majority Leader Howard W. Baker, Jr. (Tennessee) joined Reagan at the White House for a victory celebration.

The lesson of the day and the protracted, often bitter and emotional seven months of debate was clear. Never underestimate the power of the president and especially when the president has the personal charisma of Ronald Reagan.

had supported him were celebrating, Sen. Robert Packwood (Republican of Oregon), who led the move in the Secate to veto the AWACS package, called the seven-month battle he had just lost like pitting batteships

"We were simply outgunned," said Packwood who spent most of the eight hours of dehate, hands folded behind his back, pacing back and forth across the Senate chamber.

The pieces which spelled victory for Reagan started falling into place early in the day when first Slade Gorton (Republican of Washington) said he would back the sale.

With Gorton onboard, attention shifted to Mark Andrews (Republican of North Dakota) and Edward Zorinsky (Democrat of Nebraska), both signers of the resolution of disapproval but regarded as possible switch votes; and to Russell Long (Democrat of Louisiana) uncommitted but regarded as leaning toward the sale.

But before these three senators, who in the end all voted for the Saudi arms package, could play their bands, the most dramatic moment of the debate was claimed by William E. Cohen (Republican of Maine). Coben, an outspoken foe of the sale and the son of Jewish haker, criticized Saudi Arabia as "immoderate" for nearly 20 minutes and then in the last minute of his impassioned speech announced he would support the pres-

The defense minister said that the aim of the Kingdom is to achieve Arab unity and to support Arah causes, and added that "we can be respected in the world only if we respect ourselves and remained united.

On the Kingdom's role in bringing the deal to success, Prince Sultan said "we observed a quiet attitude on the activities of our young men, the armed forces, the diplomats and our friends. Their friendship stems from their love for justice and stability, no matter whether they were in America and else-

He added that there were some Saudi Arahians led by King Khaled's ambassador to the U.S., who exerted stupendous yet quiet efforts hased on justice and national dignity. He also said that, if the U.S. administration had not adopted a strong attitude, the voting would not have been the way it took place Wednesday night.

Asked to comment on the narrow margin in the voting, Prince Sultan said that the people of Saudi Arabia would have been happier to see the deal go through a sweeping majority. He, however, added that "our understanding of the nature of the American policy and the volume of pressure exerted to stop the deal make us consider the result pleasing and satisfactory".

Regarding the claims of U.S. opposition members that the Saudi Arabian armed forces woud not be able to handle the sophisticated equipment, Prince Sultan said that those who say so do not know intelligence, possessed by Saudi Arabian youth, aspiration and capability "Our heroic commissioned and non-commission officers as well as soldiers have proved that they are talented enough to make every advanced military technology easy for themselves".

He said that the AWACS deal was not included in the agenda of meeting which took place between Crown Prince Fahd and President Reagan in Cancun.

Prince Sultan said "our program will continuc and our cooperation with the European states will go on." He reiterated that the Kingdom will not bind itself to one state for the supply of arms. But we would always prefer to take sophisticated arms which we are ready to manage by ourselves. We shall continue to take sophisticated weapons from the U.S. for the land, air and naval forces."

On the future of relations with the U.S. Prince Sultan said "this glorious deed of the U.S. will provide an impetus to develop relatlons with the U.S., but not at the cost of our nationalism, It will be on the basis of cooperation on equal terms in all legitimate rights."

Prince Sultan reaffirmed the capability of Saudi Arabian armed forces personnel to handle sophisticated weapons. For instance, he said, when 05A aircraft arrived five years ago, they were piloted from the U.S. to the Kingdom by Saudi Arabian pilots. Likewise, the British-made Lightning aircraft were brought to the Kingdom by Saudi Arabian pilots. "We only employed some experts to train for a sbort time. But now all activities in the three services are being managed hy Saudi Arabians themselves.'

He said that F-15 aircraft, the first shipment of which is expected to arrive in January, will he brought by Saudi Arahians. These aireraft will be handled and maintained by Saudi Arabian technicians, be added.

In regard to the AWACS aircraft, the prince said that instructions have been issued to the army general staff to prepare Saudi Arabiao youths for being sent to the U.S. and also to bring a very few experts to train Saudi techniciaos.

Prince Sultan said that friends in the U.S. made big efforts to serve their interests in the Kingdom. In exchange, he said, the Kingdom opened avenues for Europe and America to boost their economic interests. Business connections among the peoples of Saudi Arahia, America and Europe generated respect for two years of democratic government.

By all accounts the score then stood at 50-50. A vote of 51 was needed to turn back the arms sale proposal.

Garcia Meza stepped down late this summer after dissident army commanders mounted a coup, one of several attempted during his one-year rule. His former army commander and interior minister, Torrelio, was named president by top junta members then holding interim power.

Torrelio has promised various times since assuming office that his government will eod rights abuses and restructure the paramilitary security forces enforcing the state of emergency proclaimed last year. He has promised to return the country to democracy in three years.

The commission source said the report will criticize the United States and its Western allies as contributors to the abuse and violation of "economic and social rights" of the majority of Bolivians because of their economic sanctions against the country.

Bolivia has, due to cutbacks of foreign aid and falls in production bere, entered one of its worst economic slumps in history. The Reagan administration has said relations with Bolivia will improve if authorities cooperate in curtailing the illegal trade in cocaine, much of which ends up in the United States. "The problem is this. It is not clear that President Torrelio, even though he seems to be a goodwilled man, is in charge here," the source told the AP. The draft of the report is expected to go to the Bolivian government by Nov. 15, after which there is a 30-day response period. The report is expected to be made public around mid-December.

SAMA 1980-81 report

State expenditure rises to SR212b

JEDDAH, Oct. 29 (SPA) — The total actual government expenditure during the fiscal year 1980-31 amounted to SR212 hillion, an increase of 13 percent compared to the previous year, according to the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency's annual report.

The SAMA report attributed the

The SAMA report attributed the rise to expenditures on projects, which increased by 23.1 percent. Current expenditure also recorded a slight increase of 3.6 percent, while government expenditure for the non-oil sector Gross Domestic Production (GDP) had dropped.

This reflects the expanding role played by the private sector in domestic production and the non-oil GDP, increasing its absorptive capacity, and the contribution of government spending in riyals, the report said,

It stated that the real Gross Domestic Production growth during the year dropped from the previous year's 9.6 percent to 8.1 percent. The reduction is totally attributed to the oil sector as it increased participation in the GDP hy four percent more than its 7.4 percent growth during the 1979-80 fiscal year. Meanwhile, the private sector has maintained its growth rate at 12.6 per-

The report added that the government sector recorded an improvement of 0.8 percent over the previous year's 10.1 percent mark. As a result, the oil sector's share in the real GDP growth has dropped from 48.4 percent in 1979-80 to 46.6 percent in the last fiscal year. On the other hand, the private and government sectors' contributions to the real GNP growth has increased accordingly.

In the area of monetary and hank activities, the SAMA report revealed that the money supply had risen by 20.4 percent during the 1980-81 year compared to an increase of 18.4 percent in the year before. Bank deposits have exercised a dominant influence by contributing 94 percent of the rise in money supply during the fiscal year. Bank deposits growth rate increased from 17.6 percent in the 1979-80 year to 29.2 percent in the last fiscal year, indicating a dear change from cash in hand toward hank deposits.

Currency in circulation dropped from 34.7 percent to a percentage point of 29.9. while the hank deposits' share increased to 70.1 percent in the last fiscal year from 65.3 percent in the year before.

The report also stated that net foreign assets registered growth and accounted for more than 50 percent of the hanking development growth rate allowed for the private sector. Lending institutions operating in the Kingdom continued to expand the scope of their activities during the fiscal year 1980-81, the report said. These institutions include the Saudi Agricultural Bank, the Saudi Industrial Development Fund, Energy Investments Fund, the Real Estate Development Fund and the Saudi Credit

Bank.
The total credit and loans granted by these institutions until February, 4, 1981. amounted to SR$1.5243 hillion. This represents an increase of SR$1$.3688 hillion or 29.1 percent over the same period of the year before.

During the year 1980, Saudi Arahian families living in towns with an average monthly income ranged between SR2,000 and SR7,000, set a record in the annual cost of living as the real increase amounted only 3.13 percent.

State revenues for the current fiscal year, 1981-82, were estimated at SR340 hillion while expenditure was set at SR398 according to the current budget. The state expenditure for this year represents an increase of 40.6 percent over the actual expenditure for the last fiscal year, the report said.

The expenditure allocations, according to each sector's share, indicate that the government has concentrated on developing the municipal, education, training, economic sectors and infrastructure. Large allocations also were made for increasing salaries of civil and military personnel and providing subsidies for the domesite food, agricultural and animal production sectors.

Riyadh seminar calls for fighting alcoholism

By Javid Hassan

RIYADH. Oct. 29 — A four-day seminar on alcoholism, organized by the Arab Center for Security Studies and Training, ended here Wednesday with a call for a prohe into the factors inducing alcoholism and a search for its solution. Delegates from Iraq, Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, Tunisia and Sudan besides Saudi Arahia participated in the symposium held at Riyadh University.

This was the second symposium sponsored by the center, set up last year, to promote research, conduct training and bring out publications on criminal and sociological problems in the Arab world, besides organizing exhibitions on the latest in security equipment and technology for Arah countries. The first symposium, held in January, was on prisons, its advantages and disadvantages.

Two more symposia are slated for next year. The first will be on the responsibilities of information centers in the Arah world and the second on the methods of reforming the criminal. The deliberations of this week's symposium will be hrought out in book form, according to the seminar's supervisor Hamza Yacouh.

The symposium started with a welcome speech hy the Riyadh University Vice Chancellor Dr. Mansour Al-Turki, who said the university was happy to host the deliberations aimed at examining the sociological problem

The theme of the discussions was spelled out by Dr. Farouk Murad from the Ministry of Interior. Dwelling on the baneful effects of alcoholism, he said it was for this reason that it was prohibited by Islam. Murad hoped the seminar will address itself to the prohlem and suggest how it can be rooted out.

Opening the discussions, Dr. Farid Al-Muhtadi of the College of Pharmacy (Riyadh university) defined alcohol and alcoholic addiction and the contributory factors. He also explained the physical and chemical properties of alcohol, its use in medicine and perfumery and outlined the research done at Riyadh university for substituting alcohol with other solvents. He was followed by Dr. Muhammad Ismail of the College of Education (Riyadh university) who defined alcoholism with reference to the psychological parameters of the problem.

Spotlighting attention on the factors of alcoholism. Dr. Atallah Khalidi, mental health consultant and associate professor at Riyadh, university, said three factors were responsible: The substance itself, the personality of the drinker and the cultural norms of society. He said the drinkers fell in three categories. The first was the experimentation group, the second the irregular group and the third the regular group. The first tries alcohol out of curiosity and balts there because it does not give them what they are looking for. The irregulars drink occasionally. The regulars are slaves of alcohol. They depend on it wholly and cannot accomplish anything without the bottle.

He said the chronics are so much addicted to the bottle that they would not mind stealing to get their daily ration. Thus their life was marked by a total lack of ethics. Dr. Khalidi called for research into the problem in the Kingdom. Based on ongoing research in the West, Khalidi indentified four causes of alcoholism. They were the hiochemical, psychological and sociological factors and predisposed beredity.

Dr. Mahmoud Ahu Zaid, associate professor of sociology from Imam Muhammad ibn Saud Islamic University (IMISIU), hrought a sociological analysis to bear on the problem of alcoholism. He said Islam is the only answer to the problem and can solve all problems within the society, its culture and the social structure, Dr. Abdullah Al-Rakhhan of the Shariah College (IMISIU) spoke on the Islamic way of combatting alcoholism, while Dr. Abdul Rahman Al-Mutrafi of the College of Pharmacy of Riyadh university spoke on the management and treatment of the withdrawal symptoms of alcohol. He also discussed the drugs being used to prevent the relapse of alcoholism.

As Libya moves troops

Goukouni in control, Paris says

PARIS, Oct. 29 (Agencies) — The capital of Chad is calm and President Goukouni Ouedder is alive, well and continuing to preside over the country from the presidential palace, French Foreign Ministry officials said Thursday.

Reports of Libyan troop and armored vehicle movements in the capital of N djamena had been "over-dramatized," the officials insisted during the regular daily news briefing nt the ministry. There also were reports that Goukouni bad not been seen in the capital for several days and that Foreign Minister Ahmad Acyl had entered N djamena at the head of a column of troops. Acyl is generally considered Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi's choice to replace Goukouni, who reportedly has been resisting Libyan pressure for a merger of the two countries.

"The situation was unclear Wednesday night, and we could not confirm anything," a ministry official said. "Thursday, we can tell you that President Gonkouni is in the palace. he is well, he is not under arrest, and the military balance in Chad has not changed."

The officials, who always insist on anonymity, said that the estimated 1,600 French troops stanoned in the Central African Republic, which borders Chad on the south, had been placed on alert Wednesday night. They also confirmed press reports this week that France bad agreed to ship small arms to Chad, but they refused to elaborate.

A spokesman for the French Ministry of Defense confirmed France's 1,200 troops in the Central African Republic had been put on a state of alert. But he was unable to confirm details of the Libyan action. The Lihyan troop movements coincided with the

Morocco said interested in AWACS

RABAT. Oct. 29 (AP) - U.S. Senate approval of the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia has raised the possibility that Morocco may request them for use in the tense northwest African region, Moroccan and diplomatic sources disclosed Thursday.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said no formal Moroccan request for the advance warning planes has been submitted to the Untied States, but the whole issue was under "preliminary study." Official Moroc-can and U.S. embassy spokesmen said | they had no information on the subject.

The sources said the AWACS would be used primarily to observe military activity of the Polisario movement which has been fighting a bitter desen war for six year for independence of the former Spanish Sahara.

arrival in Chad of Libya's second-incommand Maj. Abdulsalam Jalloud.

The sources said Libyan personnel and equipment were airlifted to N'djamena Tuesday night to reinforce troops already stationed round the capital. Columns of light armor entered the city Wednesday, they said.

The Libyan action follows reports circulating among diplomats at last week's international summit in Cancun, Mexico, that Qaddafi had given President Goukouni a 72-hour ultimatum to agree to a merger between their two countries. President Mitterrand last week called on the Organization of African Unity (OAU) to send a joint force urgently to Chad, a former French colony. Diplomats at Cancun said France feared Libya was planning some dramatic action in Chad.

The OAU decided in July to send a force to replace the Libyan troops which entered Chad over a year ago to belp Goukouni end a civil war between government forces and the troops of former Defense Minister Hissene Habre. Qaddafi withdrew his forces from N'djamena last May but units remained stationed outside the capital.

Earlier this week. France began supplying light arms and equipment to Chad government forces to support President Goukouni. It withdrew its own troops from the country. independent since 1960, during heavy fighting in N'djamena between the government and Habre's forces in May last year.

The French defense ministry said the troops in the Central African Repulic, mainly infantry, had been placed on the alert on the decision of the local commanding officer. He had ordered troops back to barracks and taken other unspecified precautionary measures, it added. A spokesman for the ministry of external relations said the alert had not been ordered directly by the French govern-

Iranian panel arrives in Pakistan

BEIRUT, Oct. 29 (AP) — An Iranian delegation is in Pakistan to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, Iran's Pars news agency said Wednesday.

The official news agency said the eightmember delegation is led by Deputy Foreign Minister Mubammad Lavasani. Upon arrival in Karachi Tuesday. Lavasani told reporters his country has always condemned the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan, Pars said." Iran condemns the military occupation of any one country by another, just as it condemns the occupation and usurpation of Palestine," be was quoted as saying.

The Iranians met with Pakistani economic officials in Islamabad Wednesday. Iranian Prime Minister-designate Mir Hossein Musavi told reporers in Tehran Tuesday that bis country had a new plan to solve the Afgbanistan problem. He said details of the plan would be disclosed "in a few days' time."

Musavi said that neither the United States nor European countries would be involved in the proposed plan. He said that Iran would not accept anything short of an Islamic regime to replace the present Soviet-backed one in Afgbanistan.

Meanwhile, in Geneva, the international Committee of the Red Cross said Wednesday it is seeking to get several Russians captured by rebels in Afghanistan transferred to a regular internment camp in a third country to be able to visit them.

Committee spokesman Jean-Jacques Kurz said one of the Soviet prisoners is a geologist and adviser a rebel group wants to swap against rebels held by the Kabul regime, but he declined to name the others or say bow many they were.

Kurz explained that the all-Swiss bumanitarian committee visited some fighters taken prisoner in Kabul in February last year, but after mid-June 1980, the Afghan authorities refused to renew visas for its delegates and therefore the ICRC no longer has access to Afghanistan.

U.N. asks Israelis to stop digging

UNITED NATIONS, Oct. 29 (R) --- The General Assembly told Israel Wednesday to refrain from excavating and transforming the historical, cultural and religious sites of Jerusalem.

The vote on the resolution was 114 to two with 27 abstentions. The negative votes were cast by Israel and the United States. The 10 members of the European Economic Community (EEC) were among the abstainers. The resolution demanded that Israel "desist forthwith from all excavations and transformations" of the sites. It referred in particular to the Al-Aqsa and the Dome of the Rock Mosques, which it said were in danger of collapse.

It called on Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to report on implementation of the resolution by Nov. 23, and asked the Security Council to consider the situation if Israel failed to comply with the demand.

Egypt wants autonomy talks delayed

CAIRO, Oct. 29 (R) - Egypt bas asked Israel and the U.S. to postpone Palestinian autonomy talks in Cairo to Nov. 8 from Nov. 4, Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Wednesday.

The request was made because Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Boutros Boutros Gbali will be on a mission abroad. Ghali declined to say where he would be or reveal the nature of the mission.

Ali conveyed Egypt's decision to U.S. Ambassador Alfred Atherton in an hourlong meeting Wednesday in which he also reviewed the outcome of his three days of talks in Israel which ended Tuesday. The Egyptian foreign minister said in Tel Aviv Tuesday that the future of Arah East Jerusalem and of Israeli settlements in the occupied Jordan West Bank and Gaza Strip were among the most difficult problems facing the negotiations.

U.S. cuts size of carrier force in Indian Ocean

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP) - The United States has cut its carrier force in the Indian Ocean to a single battle group for the first time in nearly two years, defense officials have acknowledged.

Although the apparent policy change has been in the works for some months, officials were reluctant to discuss it because the reduction came at a time the administration of President Ronald Reagan was fighting for its proposed sale of five AWACS Airborne Surveillance and Control Planes to Saudi Arabia which was cleared by the Senate Wednesday,

A major administration argument in favor of the AWACS sale was that it was essential to strengthen Saudi Arabia's security and demonstrate U.S. resolve to safeguard its friends and its oil supplies in the Gulf area. Officials, who declined to be identified, said the reduction from two to one carrier battle groups in the Indian Ocean area was dictated to a considerable extent by budgetary problems and the strain placed on U.S. Navy crewmen who have been kept on long deployments in that reg-

At the same time, however, the U.S. Defense Department said in response to an inquiry that "this current level does ot indicate any lessening of U.S. interest, determination or resolve in the area," The Pentagon stressed that U.S. Naval forces can be moved quickly from other areas such as the Mediterranean and Pacific into the Indian Ocean in event of a new crisis.

America adheres to Camp David

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AFP) — The U.S. government has reminded its European allies that it views the Camp David process as the "sole practical negotiating framework" for peace in the Middle East.

The reminder by State Department spokesman Dean Fischer Wednesday followed a meeting of European Economic Community foreign ministers in London that was seen by U.S. commentators as renewing the European initiative for a Mideast peace. "Our European allies understand our views that their effort should complement the Camp David process," Fischer said, referring to the accords signed by Israel and Egypt in

"We are committed to the success of Camp David which we regard as the sole practical negoriating framework," He added that "this doesn't mean that we are deaf to suggestions that could be made by other parties."

Parliament approves Musavi as Iran premier

BEIRUT, Oct. 29 (AP) --- Iran's parliament Thursday gave an overwhelming vote of approval to 39-year-old architect Mir Hossein Musavi as the nation's new prime minister, a parliament spokesman said.

The official in the public relations office of parliament, who did not give his name, told the Associated Press by telephone that with 202 deputies present. Musavi collected 115 votes with 39 members voting against his nomination and 48 abstaining.

Musavi, who holds a masters degree from Tehran's Meli University in architecture and urban planning, has been Iran's foreign minister since July 5, a militant who is a member of the central council of the ruling Islamic Republican Party, Musavi is one of the few laymen to hold a key post on Ayatollah Khomeini's clergy-led regime.

Musavi was President Ali Khamener's second choice for the premiership. One week ago, parliament voted 80 to 74 against U.S educated baby doctor Ali Akhar Velayati for Musavi, active in the IRP since the early days of the revolution which toppled the Shah in February 1979, became well know as the editor-in-chief of the Party's official newspaper Jomhouri Eslami, '' (Islamic

Western diplomats in Tehran said Musavi's fiery editorials were a major factor that led to the impeachment and dismissal of former President Bani-Sadr last June 22.

Meanwhile, eight rebels and six revolutionary guardsmen were killed Wednesday in seven hours of fighting in the Kurdish city of Mahabad, Iranian radio reported. The deaths occurred during an anack on the revolutionary guards headquarters, the post office and a bank in the northwestern fran city, the radio said, quoting a communique from the revolutionary guards.

In another development three "active members" of the Iranian Democratic Kurdish Party and a member of the Marxist-Leninist Peykar group were executed on the order of a court in Mahabad, in western Azerbaijan province. The Ettelaat newspaper reported.

A textile merchant accused of specualtion was given 50 lashes in public as part of Islamic autborities' new campaign to stiffen the fight against corruption, the newspaper Azadegan reported. It said that the man, accused of trying to flee the country, was also sentenced to a year in prison, $1.25 million fine and state seizure of all his property.

Seeking support

Mubarak meets Sadat's bitter critic

CAIRO, Oct. 29 (Agencies) — Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak, seeking to broaden support for his administration, met independent members of the People's Assembly (parliament) Wednesday.

They included Mumtaz Nassar, one of assassinated president Anwar Sadat's hitterest critics, who with others had formed a national coalition which opposed his policies. Nassar said President Mubarak pledged to achieve national conciliation to solve problems of national interest.

Last week, President Mubarak meet Ibrahim Shukri, leader of the Socialist Labor Party (SLP), who promised him support. The SLP was also at odds with the late leader, who closed down the party group and arrested its deputy leader. , Mubarak also bas moved to erase the unpopular aspects of Sadat's crackdown on political opponents last September. Sadat's arrests of extremists was widely applauded. but he alienated many people by rounding up mainstream religious men and politicians. Many Egyptians have expressed support for Mubarak's new restrictions on the possession of weapons and his continuing crackdown on extremists.

Mubarak's reputation for efficiency was reinforced when he urged Egyptians to stop buying him newspaper advertisements of congratulation and set get to work. Mubarak has responded to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's message of congratulation and request for improved Egyptian-

Soviet relations. The content of Mubarak's message is unknown. Sadat had all but closed the door to Moscow by expelling its top diplomats last month on charges they tried to incite Muslim-Christian strife, an accusation considered duhious by Western diplomats. Meanwhile, an Egyptian weekly magazine said Wednesdny there was no conflict between Mubarak's moves to reconcile relations with the Arabs and Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

Akher Sa'a, which means "last bour," said in a front page article that Egypt never denied its place to the Arah world while making peace with the Jewish state. "There is no contradiction if Egypt extends its hand to its Arah brothers at the same time holding to its treaties and agreements with Israel," said the Arabic language magazine, whose editor is appointed by the government.

The weekly praised Mubarak's decision to balt media attacks on other Arab countries, saying: "The aim was to create a suitable atmosphere (for the Arabs) to re-evaluate tbeir policies and attitudes toward Egypt, and to review their attitude toward their big sis-

Akher Sa'a criticized the Soviet Union for spreading rumors about an Egyptian build-up on the Libyan border as a result of tension between Libya and Sudan and. Egypt's commitment to support its southero neighbor Sudan. "The plain truth is there is no massing of troops on the border, and no plan to attack Libya," the magazine said.

Indo-Soviet collusion blamed

Zia denies intention to make bomb

SYDNEY, Oct. 29 (AP) - Pakistan has no intention of developing nuclear weapons, President Zia Ul-Haq was quoted

Wednesday as saying.

In an interview published in Morning
Herald with its correspondent Ranjan Gupta, Gen. Zia said Pakistan had no option but to acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purposes. "We have neither the intentions nor the capability of making oomb," he said.

He was reported as describing reports of an Islamic bomb as "propaganda by the Israeli lohhy which is trying to make Pakistan's life a little more difficult and bring Pakistan's image down in the free world." Zia was quoted as saying Pakistan would be returned to civilian rule in the next few years. "The only thing we are looking forward to is the methodology and modality to a peaceful transfer of power so that the work we have done in the last few years does not go to waste." He said he would hold elections with political parties participating and with an "Islamic touch,"

He accused the Soviet Union and India of acting in collusion against Pakistan. Zia told the correspondent that Pakistan experienced a taste of this collusion during the 1971 Bangladesh war, and was very much concerned whether this collusion could be harmful again to Pakistan. He denied a claim by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi that American arms shipments to Pakistan were a first step by the U.S. toward setting up a base in Pakistan, and said his government had made it quite clear to the U.S. it could expect no such facility.

Libya denies plan to attack Sudan

BELGRADE, Oct. 29 (Agencies) Libyan leader Muhammar Qaddafi bas reaffirmed that Libya had no intention of attacking Sudan, the official Libyan news agency Jana reported Thursday.

In a report from the pool of nonaligned news agencies distributed bere. Jana said Qaddaff's reassurance was made in a letter addressed to Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi, the current chairman of the Organization of African Unity. Libya had "no intention to carry out military acts against Sudan and had no military concentrations along the border with Sudan," Jana quoted the Qad-dafi letter as saying.

Qaddafi also said that Sudanese forces were continuing attacks against towns in Chad "in an attempt to undermine security and stability" in that country, Jana said. In the letter, Qaddafi also alleged that the Sudan "was harboring the remnants" of forces belonging to the rebel leader Hissene Habre, the ex-defense minister whose troops were ousted with Libyan belp.

CAIRO, (AFP) - A government source Thursday formally denied reports that the head of Egyptian military intelligence and the commander-in-chief of the artillery had been dismissed. According to the reports, the two officers had been held indirectly responsible for allowing the killers of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to infiltrate the military parade during which he was assassinated Oct. 6.

CANBERRA, (R) --- Australian embassy staff in Beirut were evacuated to Damascus last week where they will remain until it is judged safe for them to return, foreign ministry officials said Thursday. The action was taken before Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser announced conditional agreement to send troops to a U.S.-sponsored Sinai peacekeeping force because of fears that the announcement might provoke attacks from extreme groups opposed to the force.

TUNIS. (AFP) - Fifteen countries have so far confirmed their intention to take part in the Arab League summit in Fez, Morocco, in a month's time, league sources said here Wednesday. The countries are Bahrain, Djibouti, Iraq. Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Tunisia and the United Arah Emirates.

QUITO, (R) - Ecuador's supreme court Wednesday found former Interior Minister Bolivar Jarrin guilty of ordering the murder of a political opponent and sentenced him to 12 years in a military jail. Four former security agents were sentenced to 16 years for committing the murder and two police officers were given two and six years for complicity. Political leader Ahdon Calderon Munoz was shot dead in the port of Guayaquil in November 1978 while Jarrin was serving as interior minister.

WASHINGTON (R) - Richard Staar, a former intelligence specialist and expert on European affairs, was sworn in Wednesday as U.S. representatitve to the long-stalled negotiations on reduction of forces in Central Europe. The Vienna talks began eight years ago and have been deadlocked because the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and Warsaw Pact negotiators cannot agree on each side's basic troop strengths.

GRATEFORD, Pennsylvania (AFP) - A group of prisoners at Grateford Penitentiary here are holding nearly 40 persons hostage following the failure of an escape artempt Wednesday, prison authorities said. Three guards, four staff members and 32 prisoners are being held in the prison kitchens, according to a spokesman for Pennsylvania's Bureau of Prisons.

Blood types changed, doctors say

NEW BRUNSWICK, New Jersey, Oct. 29 (AP) - Researchers say they changed one type of blood into another using an enzyme from green coffee beans, a development that could help eliminate periodic shortages of

Using the enzyme, researchers changed type B blood into type O, the universal danor type that can be transfused into virtually any patient, according to Dr. Mercy Kuriyan, medical director of New Jersey Blood Ser-

Because type O can be used by almost any patient, the ability to change other blood types into the universal donor type would allow blood hanks to juggle the supplies on hand to meet any needs, said Jack Goldstein, chief investigator of cell hiochemistry at the blood center.

Preliminary transfusion tests show no signs of negative reactions, Ms. Kuriyan said. Goldstein said in an interview Wednesday that the enzyme, alpha galactosidase, removes the sugar galactose found in type B blood cells but not in type O. He said the enzyme does nnly that one task. The only difference between the types of blood is the presence or absence of certain sugars on the surface of red blood cells. If the wrong type blood is transfused, the hody's immunologic defenses take over to fight what the body recognizes as foreign, invading matter. Those reactinns can be fatal, researchers

The report follows an announcement last week that researchers in the United States and Japan have kept patients alive with artificial blood. The artificial blood, called fluosol. is a milky mixture of chemicals including perfluorodecalin, a chemical similar to the nonstick coatings used on kitchen pans.

Both developments should eventually help eliminate the periodic shortages of blood for transfusions. The work on changing blood types was done in the Lindslev F. Kimball Research Institute of the New York Blood Center, which is affiliated with the New Jersey group.

Dr. Dennis Donohuc, director of the division of blood products for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, called the work "potentially very significant," but said it must be carefully tested to make sure the test-tube blood can be transfused without reactions.

Goldstein heads the research team and was one of three volunteers who each received a one-milliliter injection of the test-tube blood. The units of blood normally used for transfusions are 200 times the amount the volunteers received.

The experimental cells were marked with radioactive tracers so researchers could monitor them, Goldstein said, "They (the blood cells) survived normally, there was no reaction and no antibody production that we could detect. Everything was normal," he 1969). And Sunday, he did.

NEW YORK. Oct. 29 (WP) - Now there can be oo doubt about it: Alberto Salazar is as great as his word. And Allison Roe is a lot better than hers.

Last year, Salazar said he would run 2:10 in his first marathon here. And he did. This year, he said he would break Derek Clayton's world record (2:08:33.6 set in

"I opened up my hig mouth again this year," said Salazar, 23, a native of Cuba and a June graduate of the University of Oregon, after hreaking Clayton's record Sunday by 23 seconds in 2:08:13." I had no

Roc, who had been to the doctor on Friday for treatment of teodonitis in her right ankle, refused to predict her time, much less a record. She had to be approved by the Athletics Congress to participate Sunday because she had accepted prize money in a recent race in Cascade, Ore. Two days earlier, she took the day off - Saturday she jogged - Sunday she broke the world record in 2:25:28, 13 seconds faster than Grete Waitz's record set here last year.

"I wasn't shooting for it," said Roe, 24, of New Zcaland, who won the women's division of the Boston Marathon last April. "I just wanted to be competitive, whether it was 2:30 ur 2:40, it didin't matter."

What did matter was that just about the time she was crossing the finishing line, Waitz was getting back to her hotel. Shin splints forced the defending champion out of the race at the water station before the Queensborough Bridge. She borrowed some money and took a cah bome.

Waitz, who had won the last two New York City Marathons setting world records each time, was m pain almost from the beginning (by eight miles she knew she couldn't finish). The loss of her world record, she said, did oot pain her. "I'm oot so unhappy ahout that," she said. "I only wish I had been able to defend it."

Cool, calm Salazar lives up to his word

Waitz wasn't the only former champion missing in action. Bill Rodgers, who won four straight from 1976 to 1979, never made it to the starting line although 15,179 others did. According to Peter Diamond, a producer for ABC television, Rodgers phoned him at 11:50 p.m. Saturday to say that his financial arrangements had fallen through and he would not run. Rodgers was not available for comment Sunday.

The day began with low-slung clouds and high-strung crowds, estimated at 2 ½ million people. Most of them were mannerly. "A few times a few people got overexcited," the cool, calm, Salazar said. They would run out and grah us.

Another tried to stuff a dollar hill down the shirt of John Graham, an early leader. Another tripped Julie Brown, the early women's leader, somewhere between eight and nine miles.

The crowds were particularly unruly early on in Brooklyn when the pack was most crowded. Louis Kenny of Ireland opened up an early 75-yard lead over a group of 35 runners including Salazar and set a relatively swift early pace. But just past the 10-mile mark (they were t0 seconds off world-record pace), Salazar, Graham, Jose Gomez of Mexico and several others caught up with Kenny.

They clung together for the next five miles, across the Queensborough Bridge and past the 15-mile mark. But as they Unruly crowds boost the champs to greater heights

They ran side by side, jockeying for the lead, up first avenue and past the Bistros blaring Frank Sinatra's "New York, New

At 86th Street a sign in the crowd with a pair of skinny runner's legs on it proclaimed "Go for it" and Salazar did. Between miles 16 and 17, he ran a 4:33 mile and hroke away from Gomez, his final pursuer who eventually finished 25th; between 16 and 19 miles, Salazar averaged 4:43 a mile, and at the 19-mile mark, he had a 23-second lead over Rodolfo Gomez of Mexico, who eventually finished seventh.

Salazar said he wasn't aware he was hurning ruhber. "He (Jose Gomez) started to push around 16," Salazar said. "Everytime I tried to take the lead, he accelerated. But I tooked at him and he didn't took too good. At tB, I decided I had to push it if I was going to get the record, so I picked it up."

At 20 miles, Salazar knew he had the record, that it was merely a question of "maintaining the record pace," of "Not settling for the win." The crowd wouldn't let him. "They kept reminding me." he said. After all, a promise is a promise.

The only thing he didn't beat was the computer which had predicted he would finish in 2:07:51. At 2:07:40, the band in Central Park started to play. At 2:07:50, the crowd began to whistle. And at 2:0g:13 Salazar, who knew he would get the record but "was waiting for the one minute when I could see it myself," saw it happen.

At 3:07, Salazar was composed and "feeling very relieved." After he broke the record, Clayton said he felt his head had been severed from his body. Salazar recovered quickly after the race. "For 20 minutes last year, I felt bad. Now I feel fine," he said. "I don't face six months of feeling wiped out."

In second place was Jukka Toivola of Finland in 2:10:52, followed by Hugh Jones of Eogland (2:10:59) in third and Nick Braun of England (2:11:09) in fourth.

Like Salazar, Roe took the lead on first avenue. For the first three miles, her ankle was feeling touchy. And from the beginning she was content to let Julie Brown lead, to remain with Waitz, "The lady to beat." At 12 miles, she said, "Grete cut out of the race. Suddenly she took off into a side street." But soon she was back on pace," Roe said. "After 22 kilometers (about 14 miles) she spoke to me and she said she was going to pull out." "I said," Waitz said, "Go

At t6 miles Roe took her advice. She took the lead from Brown just over the Queensborough Bridge, and after that it was a question of "Making an effort to keep up with the men."

Seven blocks from the finish line she appeared to be lagging. A man io a green warmup suit stopped to look as she went by, and the TV people said, "She's going to have to pick it up if she's going to hreak the

Guerrero catches the eye in Game Six

Dodgers claim World Series

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP) - Pedro Guerrero drove in five runs with a home run, a triple and a single as Los Angeles defeated the New York Yankees 9-2 in Game Six Wednesday night, giving the never-say-die Dodgers their fifth World Series title.

They won it in four straight games, dropping the first two in Yankee Stadium hefore winning three at home and the final game in Yankee Stadium.

In keeping with what they had dooe in the first two stages of the 1981 postseason, the Dodgers scratched and clawed their way to their first world title in 16 years and their first over the Yankees since 1963.

The 1981 World Series was one of tradition and contrasts. The two teams have met in World Series competition more often than any two - 11 times. Yet, the final Dodger victory culminated a basehall campaign that could not have broken further with tradition. After a season shortened and tom in half by baseball's first midseason strike, and following a playoff format that included unprecedeoted divisional showdowns, the series produced its special memories. The most memorable may turn out to be the decisioo to pinch-hit for Yankee starter Tommy John in the New York fourth with the score tied 1-1. The Dodgers promptly jumped on reliever George Frazier for three runs in the fifth and Los Angeles went oo to score four more in the sixth. As the series unwound, it was two aging teams battling, perhaps for one last chance at World Series glory. The glory weot to the Dodgers, owned by quiet, refined Peter

O'Malley, and the Yankees, who had been openly criticized throughout the seasons by their bomhastic owner George Steinhrenner, were denied their 23rd World Series Champ-

By the end of the game, Yankee Stadium, which had held 56,513, was half-empty and nearly silent in shock. The Dodgers raced onto the field after the final out but quickly retreated as dozens of fans poured out of the

Ron Cey, drove in the go-ahead run in the fifth inning with a single and Guerrero pounded home two more with a triple to the wall in the deepest part of the stadium, about 430 feet from home plate.

Cey left the game for a pinch hitter in the next inning, suffering from the effects of the beanball. He had been hit on the batting helmet above the left ear by a pitch from Yankees reliever Rich Gossage. All parties agreed it was an accident hut Cey's performance was Dave Lopes led off the fifth with a ground single between third baseman Graig Nettles, also playing despite an injury, and shortstop Larry Milbourne, Bill Russell sacrificed Lopes to second and, one out later, Cey strode to the plate. 'The Penguin' hit a bouncer up the middle that eluded second hasemen Willie Randolph and the Dodgers led 2-1. A bloop single over the middle by Dusty Baker sent Cey to third and Guerrero hit the first pitch from reliever

George Frazier for his two-run triple. The inning made a loser of Frazier for the third time in the series, hreaking a World Series mark for six and seven-game series. Jon Matlack of the New York Mets in 1973 lost twice in a seven-game series, and Dan Quis Jerry of the Kansas City Royals lost a

The Dodgers ended all doubts that New York's tumultuous season was over in the four-run sixth, sending 10 men to the plate. After striking out Yeager, reliever Ron Davis, who started the inning, walked Hooton and Lopes. Russell's seeing-eye single between Nettles and Milbourne sent Hooton home and chased Davis in favor of Rick Reuschel, who had started and lost Game Four in Los Angeles. On Reuschel's 0-1 pitch to Steve Garvey, Lopes and Russell executed a double steal. Reuschel walked Garvey inentionally to load the hases and Derrel Thomas came into hit for Cey, who complained of Wooziness.

Thomas hit a grounder to Nettles' right at intro. As Nettics fielded the ball, he stumbled over the bag and Russell was out, but Nettles' throw to first was late, by a hair, as Lopes scored the second run of the inning.

Baker then hit a sharp one-hopper to Nettles, who bobbled the ball for an error, and the bases were loaded for Guerrero. Guerrero hit Reuschel's first pitch into left-center field, scoring Garvey and Thomas, and giving the Dodgers an 8-1 lead before winning 9-2.

Ipswich named 'team of year'

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AFP) - Bulgarian international Stfpjr Georgui Slavkov received the Golden Boot trophy for 1980-81 and UEFA Cup winners lpswich Town of England were named "Team Of The Year" at an awards ceremony here Thursday.

Slavkov. 23, plays for Trakia Plovdiv and has held his place in the Bulgarian national side since 1978. His total for the season of 3t goals was mainly due to a scoring spree of 11 goals in the last five league matches. Four goals came in the final game. This enabled him to pip Tibor Nyilasi.

Ferencearos' elegant Hungarian international who scored 30 goals and took the runoer-up spot in the "Golden Boot" awards.

It was the second time a Bulgarian had won the trophy after Petar Jekov (1969) and the fifth time a Hungarian had finished second after Anta Dunai (1968), Ferenc Varedi (1977), Lazslo Fekete (1979) and Lazslo Fazekas last year.

In the "Team Of the Year" rankings. Bohby Robson's Ipswich town finished one point ahead of the team they beat over two legs in the UEFA Cup final, Dutch champions AZ 67 Alkmaar.

Apart from winning their first European crown, Ipswich were unlucky to finish runners-up to Aston Villa for the English League title and reached the semifinal of the English FA Cup.

Alkmaar's disappointment in the UEFA Cup final was compensated by completing the Dutch League-Cup double. West German champions Bayero Munich finished third on 18 points with European champions Liverpool and Portuguese champions Benfica equal fourth on 16 points. "Golden Boot" placings: 1. Georgui Slavkov (Trakia Plovdiv-Bulgaria) 3t points, 2. Tibor Nyilasi (Ferencearos — Hungary) 30, 3. Karl Heinz Rummenigge (Bayern Munich - W. Germany) 29, 4. Szarmach (Auxerre - Poland) 28; 5. Burgs Muller (Dortmund - W. Germany) 27; 6. Radovpc (Rijeka - Yugoslavia) 26, 7. Kiss (Vasas Budapest — Hungary) 25, 8. Vanden Bergh (Lierse — Belgium) 24, 9. Onnis (Tours-France) 24.

European "Team Of The Year" placings: 1. Ipswich Town 20, points; 2. Az 67 Alkmaar 19, 3. Bayero Munich 18; 4. Benifica and Liverpool 16; 6. Roma, Aston Villa, Standard Liege (Belgium) and Real Madrid 13; 10. St. Etienne (France), Juventus (Italy), Anderlecht (Belgium) and Glasgow Celtic (Scotland) 12.

Defense Minister Prince Sultan summed up Saudi Arabia's position after the Senate vote saying the event was a triumph of American interests over others and a proof of the government's freedom to make decisions serving that interest.

While the government of Saudi Arabia will always be grateful for such positive and understanding responses to its requests to improve the standard of its armed forces, it appreciated also the growing changes in the American public opinion toward this part of the world.

Prince Sultan said this swing gives rise to optimism and he hoped that even those who opposed the sale will come to realize that they had made a mistake because they had based their opposition on wrong premises. They did not sufficiently understand the need of the vast Kingdom for reliable weapons and early warning systems to safeguard resources which are of crucial importance to a large part of the world. Such systems will contribute to the stability and security of a vital region which, in turn, will be reflected on the rest of the world.

This has been the plea of the Kingdom all along. It had no aggressive intentions and has never been charged with aggression, directly or indirectly. The AWACS do not attack and are indeed vulnerable to attack. They are meant to stay within the national boundaries of the owner state, well within the laws governing international relations.

So why all the furor in Congress and the Jewish-influenced press? Because Israel wanted to maintain the freedom of action in the Middle East skies at the expense of the Arabs. It continued this practice of attacking at will until only a few weeks ago when Syria moved its missiles into the Bekaa Valley to discourage wanton raids on the civilians of Lebanon.

Now the Senate vote has signaled a historical change of heart in the U.S. This means that there is a substantial part of the American people convinced that not all Arcerican interests pass through Israel and that there are other major interests which lie elsewhere and which Israel is trying to undermine.

This, then, is perhaps the real value of the deal. Saudi Arabia would have gone elsewhere to buy similar weapons and planes. The country has the influence, prestige, connections, and wealth to get practically all its wants on the open market. But the awakening of America to its true interests and the humiliation of the Jewish lobby were well worth the exercise.

There may be even another and bigger result from the success of President Reagan in getting the deal through. He has emerged as one of the strongest presidents in contemporary history, certainly much stronger than Carter. He has challenged and defeated the Jewish lobby, which will take years to lick its wounds before making another attempt at interfering in American foreign policy matters. Reagan will thus be in a better position than any one else before him to strive sincerely for a just solution of the Middle East question. Perhaps the Middle East is fated to make Reagan one of America's greatest leaders.

Sudan denies giving aid to Chad opposition

By A Special Chrrespondent

KHARTOUM — Khartoum's once-bustling souks are now almost devoid of their usual swarm of petty traders and casual laborers. They have disappeared in the Sudan government's huge roundup of "aliens, criminals and vagrants". Some 12,000 people have been held, according to First Vice-President Gen. Abdul Majid Hamid Khalil. He accused them of trying to create chaos "by raising prices and creating scarcity of commodities."

The general, who is commander-in-chief of the armed forces and secretary of the country's only political party, the Sudan Socialist Union, added: "We arrested only 12,000 out of three million, yet after 48 hours there was complete relief in the capital."

Accusing Col. Muammar Qaddaff's regime in Libya of "the intention of doing something inside the Sudan to overthrow the regime or create havoc," he claimed those arrested were bent on sabotage. "We found hundreds of thousands of dollars on people living in absolute poverty. From that you can imagine how Lihya is playing the game."

The vice-president was speaking at a press conference called for the dozens of journalists, especially from American televisioo, who have descended on this unusually placid city in the wake of President Sadat's assassination. However, questions centered not on the security clampdown, which is mainly of interest to local people, but on the situation on Sudan'sborder with Chad.

Although it is widely believed that Chadian opposition leader Hissene Habre moves freely across the border and receives assistance from Sudan, the vice-president emphatically denied that his government was extending any kind of support to Habre. Circumveoting persisteot questioning oo Habre's whereabouts, he pointed out that the Sudanese army is unable to patrol all of Sudan's long western borders. "I can't tell you how he is operating or where he is operating; that's not our concern," he said.

Sudan's coocern was to see unity restored in Chad. "If Libya withdraws iomorrow, we're ready to support Goukouni or Kamougue or whoever rules in Chad." he said. Sudan thus maintains its army's activities are defensive, aimed both at foiling Libyan-backed suhversion and protecting the bor-

Libyan planes are reported to have bombed a number of Sudanese villages on the Chadian border. These include Kulhus, which has seen an influx of several thousand refugees from Chad over the past couple of years. Many of the refugees are Hahre fighters, and while they are supposed to have given up their arms to the Sudanese authorities, some sources claim they are still active Habre guerrillas.

Denying that Habre himself was in Kulhus, the vice-president said such claims were being made by Libya as "an excuse to mislead the world," he also denied that Egyptian forces were in Sudan apart from "very few instructors" and said that, in the light of the mutual defense pact, Sudan would have no reason to hide Egyptian troops if they were present.

The forthcoming combined training exercises with Egypt and the U.S. he described as "not something new," pointing out that similar maneuvers had often been held with, among others, British troops,

The recent doubles of American military aid would not meet total defense needs but would "upgrade efficiency," he said, refusing to give details of the aid. In answer to a question on whether AWACS had been allowed to fly along the Sudan-Chad border, the vice-president replied: "If the need is there, and early warning is to be given, I think we will ask our friends the Americans to give us early warning."

As journalists continued their attempts to get permission and transport to the distant border areas, the clampdown continued in Khartoum. In a parallel development, the formation of a National Front for the Salvation of Libya was announced in Khartoum on Oct. 6, shortly before Sadar's death was made public.

Spokesman for the front was former Libyan amhassador to India Dr. Muhammad Youssef al Maghariaf, one of a succession of prominent Libyans who have denounced the Lihyan goveroment recently from Khartoum. The Sudanese capital had been chosen for the announcement, the Sudan News Agency quoted Dr. al Maghariaf as saying, because President Numeiri "is one of the people who know the reality of Qaddaff and therefore Qaddaff fears the most." — (ONS)

Iran's life bleak but not yet hopeless

By Charles W. Naas

WASHINGTON —
Every day, Iranian exiles and Iranian experts in Washington observe from afar the numbing parade of horrors and wonder how long that country's fragile social and governmental fabric can hold together. They follow the daily "body count" of executions and assassinations (1,800 since early summer, according to Amnesty International); the vicious armed clashes in central Tehran between the revolutionary guards and the left-wing guerrilla movement, the Mujahedeen, in which scores of innocent passershy are killed and wounded; the war with Iraq, and the revolutionary rhetoric of Ayatollah Khomeini.

Yet from that shattered country come occasional surprises. The recent victory of Iran's armed forces near the Iranian oil-refinery city of Abadan was, according to informed sources in Washington, a very sizable one ery sizable one. So, while the exiles in Europe play games hijacking a boat or holding endless strategy sessions, their former comrades-in-arms are fighting a tenacious hattle and organizing the resupply of equipment and ammunition. Despite the endless purges of high-ranking officers, the military retains some cohesiveness.

After three years of revolution, the Iranian economy might be expected to be near collapse, but facts do not support that premise. Those who hope that economic deprivation will cause a mass desertion from Khomeini in the next few months are in for a disappointment. The regime recognizes that its support rests with the lower economic groups, which can be hrought into the streets when necessary. Therefore, it is doing its best to take care of those people's basic needs.

In Iran today, life is very hleak but not yet bopeless. At present, Iran has roughly $4 hillion in foreign exchange, $2 billion to $3 billion in gold and a collection of other assets totaling $2 hillion to $3 hillion. Oil exports have been ranging from 600,000 to 1.1 million barrels a day, which, at $36 a harrel, can provide $10 hillion to $14 hillion in yearly earnings.

However, a financial crunch could hit Iran next year if the war continues and Iran's oil exports cannot increase. The economy is in stark contrast to the booming 1970s. Now, unemployment is a staggering 30 percent to 40 percent, but several social factors — the sharing of goods among the closely knit family units, assistance from the local mosques or the various new foundations and direct government aid — are easing the hardships.

The Iranian people have weathered bad times before. For example, during the early 1950s, not a drop of oil was exported for nearly three years, following Muhammad Mossadegh's nationalization of the oil industry, yet somehow Iranians made ends

These are some of the facts that exiled Iranians have to face. They must also deal with the political ramifications of the perhaps inadvertent romanticizing of the Mujahedeen by the world press in its daily interviews with its exiled leader, Masoud Rajavi in Paris. Rajavi, whose death sentence was apparently commuted to life imprisonment in the early 1970s by the Soviet Union's intervention with the Shah, is the new celebrity trying to follow Khomein's techniques to power.

French philosopher Andre Glucksmann has written that the readiness to suffer death is the greatest power that a community may have. In Iran today, where martyrdom has deep religious and cultural roots, it is the Mujahedeen who are using the power of a people willing to die in seizing the leadership of the anti-Khomeini movement.

If the moderate exile groups cannot end their petty hickering and arrive at alternative courses of action, they will again be left in the wake as the revolution goes on. (LAT)

Saudi Arabian Press Review

The weekend newspapers led with the U.S. Congress' approval of the sale of the Airborne Warning and Control Systems (AWACS) aircraft to Saudi Arabia. They said President Ronald Reagan has triumphed over the Ziooist lobby in the U.S., which lost 48 to 52 in the U.S. Senate.

Newspaper editorials mostly discussed the AWACS deal. Al Madina observed that the approval of the deal gives an evidence that lhe Jewisb lobby in the U.S. will not be difficult to handle if the Arabs pursue the way Saudi Arabia has adopted in laying stress on the joint interests of the Arab states and America.

"The success of the deal is undoubtedly a defeat to Israel and a triumph for the U.S. in taking an independent decision which the Zionists have been trying to influence through their ioterveolion," the paper said. It added that Saudi Arabia tackled the issue with a historical and realistic logic based on its own principles. The paper said it was its belief since the very heginning that, if the U.S. legislative machinery worked for the nation's interest, it would find it illogical to oppose the deal which would only reinforce hilateral ties. "Now that these relations have passed the test, it is hoped that further successes will follow when the U.S. moves toward a serious work in the interest of peace and justice in the Middle East," the paper concluded.

Okaz noted that the U.S. Congress' approval of the AWACS deal is in the first place a triumph for President Reagan in conducting the foreign policy of his country and a defeat for the Zionist lohhy which has always tried to dominate the U.S. decision. 'By approving the deal, the U.S. Congress has shown its prudence in not being led hy the Zionists who had tried to prove that Israel, in fact, directs the U.S. foreign policy," said the paper, adding that the deal has opened the eyes of the American people, so they realize how much the Zionist entity holds sway over their destiny.

"President Reagan's victory in the AWACS case is no less than the restoration of the American will and determination which Israel had managed to monopolize. We hope that the U.S. will be the master of its own decision and look toward peace and stability in the Middle East with a neutral attitude, which would go a loog way in serving peace not only in this region but in the world as a whole." it added.

In an editorial. Al Nadwa described the approval as indispensable, because it involved a triumph of the voice of righteousness over the din that the Zionists had created. "Furthermore, the approval represents a victory of principles and a triumph for the Americao nation which knows very well where its supreme interests lie."

At the same time, the paper said that "we don't consider the AWACS deal the end of our requirements and the last sophisticated arms deal with the U.S., but it is only a beginning of a long-drawn plan which we shall pursue with steadfastness without caring for the Ziooist clamor." The paper felt proud that the Saudi Arabian leadership has handled the AWACS deal with great wisdom, subtlety and patience — a matter that nonplussed the Zionist lobby and made it feel, for the first time perhaps, that its elimination has already begun.

"In fact, the AWACS deal symbolized a confrontation at political, military, economic and psychological levels between a peace-loving people and the Zionist and colonialist forces which have consistently tried to jeopardize peace and stability of these people," said the paper. Al Nadwa added that the experience of the AWACS deal must provide an impetus 10 the American nation to take the whole situation in their own hands, without allowing themselves to be guided by the Zionist terrorists whose only aim is to hlast the opportunities of a just and lasting peace in the region.

Al Jazirah observed that the AWACS deal has brought President Reagan into the camp of history, making him one of the greatest American leaders to be remembered for a long time. The deal has, indeed, constituted a turning point in Saudi-American relations, Arab-American relations and also American-Jewish relations, the paper said. It added that the American people were on the brink of losing a "respectable amount of money and the friendship of 150 million, Arabs, just for the pleasure of a small state". The paper said further that "we congratulate ourselves and out friends in the U.S. for the fact that the Saudi Arabian will power has been ahle to achieve a big political victory oot only for itself but for the whole Arab nation."

This victory has made the Americans strike a balance between their national interests and the narrow interests of the pressure-wielding forces, said the paper, and congratulated President Reagan who, it said, has now emerged as a "historical hero" as a result of the decision on the AWACS. "He will be congratulated once more when he recognizes the Arah rights on the hasis of justice, especially as he has now come to realize that the Zionist influence was only a wooden horse that was not hard for America to hreak," the paper concluded.

Al Bilad said that the approval of the AWACS delivery was a new feather in the cap of Saudi Arahian quiet diplomacy at the international level. "This diplomacy has been active on the basis of Saudi Arahia's firm principles which derive their inspiration from our sublime values and comprehensive objectives of supporting the issues of the region and consolidating the elements of peace and security there," the paper said.

It added that the world Zionism has played an ignoble role not only in the U.S. hut also in Europe to thwart the AWACS deal. "It employed all its propaganda media to undermine Saudi Arahia's world role in the interest of humanity at large. The deal has further confirmed that Saudi Arahia's peace efforts symbolize the desire for peace and siability so often expressed by the people of the region and other peace and justice-loving peoples of the world," the paper concluded

What sort of man

By Adil Selehi

Last week we claimed that Islam is the ideology most suited for man. Before we try to support our claim by illustrating the Islamic view on the various aspects of life we need to state the Islamic concept of man.

Islam assigns to man a position he does not enjoy in any other ideology. This seems surprising when we read in the Qur'an verses which condemn man in no moderate terms. Man is, on the other hand, praised highly in the Qur'an. Indeed, his praise and denunciation may occur in the same verse. This juxtaposition simply means that man has the ability to elevate or dehase himself, since he can equally be good or wicked. Hence he can be given a charge, and held responsible for it.

From the Islamic viewpoint man is responsible for what he does, as an individual and as a community. No one pays for any body else's fault. The Qur'an states: Each man is the hostage of his own deeds. (52; 21) That nation has passed away. Theirs is that which they earned, and yours is that which you earn. You will not be questioned about what they used to do. (2: 134).

The basis of man's responsibility as outlined in the Qur'an is so comprehensive as to satisfy anyone who seeks to know the wisdom behind any religious legislation. The Qur'an states three fundamental principles for man's responsibility: conveyance, knowledge and action.

Anyone to whom the Divine call, especially in matters of faith, has not been conveyed is not held to account. The Qur'an teaches us: An apostle is sent to every nation. When their apostle comes, justice is done among them; they are not wronged. (10; 48) No soul shall bear another's burden. Nor do we punish a nation until We have sent forth an apostle (to warn them). (17; 15).

As for knowledge, the very first revelation of our Prophet contained an order to read and a reference to Allah's knowledge and to man's knowledge as well: Read: Your Lord is the most Bounteous, Who has taught man the use of the pen, has taught man what he did not know. (96; 3-5) The Qur'an tells us also that what distinguishes man from the rest of creation is the knowledge Adam has been taught when Allah made him his vicegerent on earth.

The action required of man is related to his ability and his efforts. We read in the Qur'an: Allah does not charge a soul with more than it can bear. (2; 286) Each man shall be judged by his own labors (53; 39) Whoever has done an atom's weight of good will see it then, and whoever has done an atom's weight of evil will see it than also. (99; 7-8)

The messangers who conveyed Allah's messages were the first to be charged with both knowledge and action. They share together in being sent to mankind and in worshipping the Lord of the universe.

The Qur'an describes man in the pinnacle of perfection be can achieve. He is also described when he sinks low in abasement. Of the first type we have verses such as: We have bestowed blessings on Adam's children and guided them by land and sea. We have provided them with good things and exalted them above many of Our creatures. (17; 70)

What the Qur'an teaches

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful

TA HA. It was not to distress you that We revealed the Qur'an but to admonish the God-fearing. It is a revelation from Him who has created the earth and the lofty heavens, the Merciful who sits enthroned on high.

His is what the heavens and the earth contain, and all that lies between them and underneath the soil. You have no need to speak aloud; for He has knowledge of all that is secret and all that is hidden.

He is Allah. There is no God but Him. His are the most gracious names.

Of the other type we read: Truly, man is oppressive, thankless (14:34), Indeed, man tryannises, once he thinks himself self-sufficient (96:6-7) Man is certainly a loser (103:2) Man is surely ungrateful to his Lord (100:6).

Both descriptions may indeed occur side by side: We indeed have created man in the fairest form. Then we brought him down to the lowest of the low. (95;

Only to man among all creation such adjectives as 'unbeliever, oppressive, tyrannical, loser and wicked may be attached. The reason is simply that man, among all creation, can be a 'believer, just, winner and good'. What decides the actual type of description is man himself. The criterion is what man does with the abilities he has been equipped with, and how he handles his responsibility.

Life of the Prophet – 30 A significant recruitment

The immigration to Abessynia gave the appearance that the Muslims in Makkah were much fewer than their actual number. This helped in averting any all out aggression the Makkans might have been contemplating. Support for such an action would not be readily forthcoming if the problem was made to appear much smaller in size.

The immigration, however, made those who were left behind much more vulnerable. There would be many more tormentors for every Muslim left in Makkah. In that tribal society where personal and tribal influence counted for much more than physical or numerical strength, the balance could be restored easily if people of the right caliber should come forward. It was in recognition of this fact that the Prophet used to pray Allah in those days to support Islam by making either Abu Jahl or Umar ibn Al-Khattab join the ranks of the Muslims.

The two were very hostile to Islam. Abu Jahl was the arch enemy. Umar betrayed no soft feelings toward the Muslims. Indeed he used to torture a slave woman in an attempt to make her renounce Islam. It speaks a lot for the Prophet's confidence in the truth of what he was preaching that he should solicit a change of heart by one of these two men.

One day Umar resolved to put an end to the conflict in Makkah by killing Muhammad. He therefore went out, carrying his sword and seeking Muhammad.

He was presently met by a man called Nuaim ihn Abdullah who, like many others, hoped to escape trouble by keeping secret the fact that he was a Muslim. Nuaim asked Umar where he was going. Unhesitatingly. Umar declared his purpose. Nuaim then said: "Your strength has certainly fooled you. Would you imagine that the Abd Manaf clan(to which the Prophet belonged) would leave you to walk these roads when you have killed Muhammad. Would not you be better advised if you go back to your own household and put them in the right course."

Umar asked: "What do you mean, and who of my household?" Nuaim said: "Your cousin and brother-in-law Sa'eed ibn Zaid, and your sister, Fatima, have both followed Muhammad and become Muslims."

Obviously Nuaim's purpose was to divert Umar's attention. If Umar would be preoccupied with his own household the Prophet would be in no imminent danger from the quarter

Sa'eed and his wife Fatima also kep secret the fact that they were Muslims. When Umar approached their home they were studying the Qur'an with a fellow Muslim called Khahbah. When they realized that Umar was approaching Khabbah sought some where to hide while Fatima hid the sheet they were reading.

In his fury Umar asked as he entared

In his fury Umar asked as he entared about the voices he overheard. Receiving an unsatisfactory answer from his sister he assaulted his hrother-in-law making it clear that he knew their secret. His sister rushed to push him away from her hushand hut he struck her on her face. She then said with courage and determination: "Yes indeed; we are Muslims; we believe in Allah and His messenger. You may do as please."

The sight of blood on his sister's face

The sight of blood on his sister's face made Umar feel sorry for her. He said tenderly: "Give me what you have been reading. Let me see what Muhammad teaches." When she hesitated, expressing her fear that he may destroy the sheet, he swore by his idols to give it hack to her after reading

The sheet contained the opening verses of Surah 20 (Ta Ha). Umar was impressed and said "How beautiful and how noble". At this point Khabbah came out and told Umar about the Prophet's prayer for fresh support to Islam saying: "I sincerely hope that you would come forward in answer to the Prophet's prayers.

Umar then declared that he wants to be a Muslim and asked to be taken to the Prophet to declare his new faith. That was to be a landmark in the history of Islam.

Kampala lively by day, changes occur at night

By T.R. Lansner

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — At twilight, thousands of bats leave their trees in a vally near downtown Kampala and fly over the city in a silent cavalcade to feed on insects along the marshy shores of nearby Lake Victoria. As the bats begin their nightly migration, residents of this jittery East African capital of nearly half a million start another migration of sorts: They hurry home to avoid getting caught out before darkness falls over the city.

Though hustling hy day, the streets of Kampala are empty and eerle once the sun goes down—left to armed rohbers known as "kondos" or soldiers who eyewitnesses say waylay pedestrians and vehicles, sometimes killing or wounding their victims.

"I have a Mercedes," remarked a Kampala businessman who asked not to be identified, 'hut I'm keeping it up on blocks in a garage. I hope I can drive it without worry in a couple of years."

It's been nine months since the lifting of a 10. p.m.-to-dawn curfew which was imposed in the aftermath of the toppling of Idi Amin by Ugandan rebels and troops from neighboring. Tanzania in April 1979

Eyewitnesses have reported that the army's anti-guerrilla operations amount to little more than the looting of villages. Others with no political motives simply take advanage of the confusion and the ready availability of weapons to steal what they can.

The kondos, often brandishing AK-47 automatic rifles, are in action around the city even during the day. The U.S embassy has reported the loss of nine vehicles at gunpoint over the past two years and the United vations Development Program, more than

Despite the security problems, Kampala is not without a social life. Crowds regularly jam the city's main sports stadium to root for their favorite soccer teams. On weekends, young people go to Kampala's discos.

But soccer games begin at 3 p.m. and end well before dusk. The discos open in midafternoon and closed before the cloud of bats sweeps over the city and blots out the waning light.

Although Kampala is a scarred city, its setting amid seven hills in lush green countryside softens the desolate images of bombed and burned out shops and potholed roads. Most of the damage was done in a spree of looting after Amin's overthrow. But many businesses have been laid waste since, and the hlame placed on soldiers.

At the end of September, fire destroyed several shops near the Imperial Hotel downtown. An official announcement hlamed an electrical fault, hut policemen, and many Kampala residents who wandered by to gawk at the damage, were convinced soldiers set the hlaze.

Obote argues that even if crimes are committed by men in military uniforms, they are not necessarily his soldiers. He contends that bandits and "terrorists" dress in army gear and sometimes even mount their own roadblocks.

"I have restricted the army throughout Uganda to barracks," the president told a news conference earlier this month. "When I hear of an incident alleged to have been committed by the army, I know straightaway that it is all these other people who are doing

A few aspects of life in Kampala are improving. Some long-neglected roads are being repaired, and city council workers are busy cutting grass and cleaning up accumulated dirt and rubble.;

The city's ontdoor markets are flourishing. Soap, salt, sugar and gasoline, in desperately short supply a few months ago, are again freely available. Produce flows in from the fertile countryside. In repair shops, ingenious mechanics make do with hits of scrap and sometimes homemade spares to keep vehicles and machinery running.

Along with tropical fruits and ahmdant vegetables, the markets' fastest-moving commodity is rumors. Named for a crowded Kampala suhurh, "radio katwe" is the urban grapevine. And the rumor mill is far more interesting, and frequently accurate.

Cassava poisons Africans, drought increases cyanide

By Joseph Hanlon

MAPUTO (G) — More than 1,000 people a northern Mozamhiqe have been partially analyzed during the past five months. The ause is cyanide poisoning from cassava, the taple food in the area, according to Dr. Fernando Vaz, the vice-minister of health. Most assava contains cyanide, but it is not harmful the food is prepared properly. This tuber is common food throughout Africa because it rows easily in poor conditions, and cassava misoning is a recognized disease.

However, health officials here say that an unhreak such as this, involving large numers of people who are suddenly parralyzed, unprecedented. The officials admit that hey still do not fully understand the outreak. Indeed, it was first assumed to be an pidemic of a virus disease such a polic. Most victims are women and children. Most victims are women and children. All ave paralized legs. Many have difficulty peaking and are partially hlind. Nearly all ve in Memha District in Nampula Province.

An investigation by a team from the ministry of health showed that the outhreak was caused by a variety of factors, most linked to the severe (but isolated) two year drought in the district. Normally in this area, cassava is dried for three months and then washed to eliminate much of the cyanide. Then it is caten with a curry of beans, fish, or meat. The protein in the curry allows the body to detoxify the remaining cyanide. Finally, cassava is normally eaten alternatively with maize.

This year, however, all crops except the drought resistant cassava failed. There was no maize or beans to eat — or to trade for meat and fish. This meant that people ate cassava every day. And, instead of beans or fish in their curry, they used cassava leaves, which also contains cyanide.

As the food shortage worsened, people were forced to eat cassava directly from the ground, without waiting for it to dry properly. This is more serious than it would be normally, because the cyanide content of cassava actually increased during a drought.

Lab tests conducted with the assistance of the World Health Organization have confirmed the local view that it is cassava poison-

A variety of common diseases could be cured using new techniques of human brain grafting

By Lois Timnick

LOS ANGELES, (LAT) — When Mary Shelley's fictional character Dr. Frankenstein performed what might be called the first hrain transplant, he inadvertently created a monster. Now the first such human graft may really be at hand, although it involves transplanting only a few thousand hrain cells, not an entire organ as has been done with hearts and kidneys.

And it will be a far more modest procedure with a humanitarian aim: To help patients with neurological and endocrine diseases like Parkinson's, Huntington's chorea and diabetes insipidus, and those who have lost memory and other higher functions in the degenerative process of aging.

A team of researchers at the National Institute of Mental Health has successfully transplanted clumps of certain kinds of hrain cells in rats and monkeys, and has said it may try the procedure on humans as soon as 1985.

Such far-fetched notions as brain transplantation and the reconnection and regeneration of severed spinal cord stumps are moving tantalizing close to reality, as researchers discover that what was thought to be hopeless is possible if they can only learn to play the game by the correct hiological rules. An international group of scientists from the United States, Canada and Sweden reported new findings about some of those rules that govern nerve cells survival and regrowth — and their implications — at a special symposium here at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

The first recipients of the so-called brain transplants prohably will be patients with Parkinson's disease, according to Dr. Richard Jed Wyatt, a member of the National Institute of Mental Health team.

Parkinson's is a nervous system disorder marked by tremors, stiff muscles and a peculiar gait. Affecting about 200,000 Americans, it is associated with a deficiency of a chemical messenger in the hrain called dopamine. The only known treatment for the disease is a drug called L-dopa, which is not always effective and which can have severe side effects.

tive and which can have severe side effects.

In their animal studies, members of the institute team squirt a syringe of cells containing dopamine from a healthy fetal brain into an animal with a brain disorder similar to Parkinson's.

The cells that the scientists use are removed from a midbrain area called the substantia nigra, which contains the neurons that make dopamine and use it to signal the neurons that they contact. The new cells are injected into the receiving animal's forebrain, just next to an area that coordinates movement, known as the caudate nucleus.

Surprisingly, the animal does not reject the foreign cells, probably because of the blood-hrain barrier that prevents antigens and antibodies from moving back and forth.

In more recent experiments, the cell grafts have been taken from the animal's own adrenal gland, a preedure that will be preferable once transplantation reaches the human stage. In those experiments, Wyatt said in an interview here, the grafts "took" immedi-

The raf's abnormal rotating movements—the rodent equivalent of the movement disorder in humans— ceased.

Wyatt said the grafted cells do oot appearto send out long axons, the arm-like cahles that carry signals to oeighboring neurons, but that they secrete dopamine that simply "leaks" into the nearby area of the hrain where it can be utilized.

The work has progressed to monkeys—with one certain success so far—and the team is gradually moving on to new problems, such as whether the monkey's lack of dexterity in picking peanuts out of a dish parallels the motor difficulties seen in human Parkinsonism.

Both Wyatt and neuroscientists discussing the issues of transplantation and regeneration stress that their work is still in the experimental, preliminary stages, and that scientists are a long way from routine correction of brain defects or repair of injured spinal cords.

It has long been axiomatic in medicine that the body's considerable recuperative powers do not extend to the central nervous system and that, once lost, cells of the brain and spinal cord are forever gone.

Electrical stimulation of nerve stumps does not result in regrowth in the central nervous system, and Soviet reports of success in reconnecting severed spinal cords have not been substantiated by Western scientists.

"Scientists have held that the central nervous system cannot regenerate," said Silvio Varon, a cellular neurohiologist at the University of California at San Diego. "All we are saying now is that it does not, hut has the potential for doing so if only we knew the circumstances, the rules of the game."

Scientists at the symposium said they are only now learning the manner in which nerve fibers branch after injury in the very young animal, the specific growth chemicals that are secreted by injured nerve endings in tissue that has the capacity to regenerate, and how the kind of cell that surrounds and insulates nerve fibers can help them bridge wide gaps and make new connections.

Those findings could lead to the synthesis of chemical stimulants for damaged nerves.

Thieves plague Burmese war cemetery, U.S. hostages report use grave plaques as car spare parts HTAUKKYAN, Burma, (R) — Asia's largest war cemetery, hurial ground for more than 30,000 Commonwealth and American soldiers and airmen, has been raided hy thieves who have been stealing the bronze name plaques to melt down for spare parts for cars. The cemetery's supervisor, Oecar Dewar, a Burmesekaren tribesman and stepson of a New Zealand missionary, wants to electrify each grave to stop the rohbers.

The caretaker of a 14 acre (five hectare) plot 22 miles (35 km) east of Rangoon, the Burmese capital, that in response to his plea to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission in Maidenhead, England, for extra security be was sent one hurglar alarm which had an operating radius of 30 feet (10 meters).

Dewar, 37, was advised that a security guard was not the commission's policy and that guard dogs would destroy the sanctity of the graves. One dog let loose at night recently fell into an open well and drowned, be said.

The commission told him that anything stolen would he replaced. The immaculatelykept parkland, containing 6,241 individual graves and the remains of 27,000 war dead collected from sites around Mandalay and in northern Burma, was the scene of the last major hattle against the Japanese before the capitulation in 1945.

Among the dead of Britain, Australia, New Zealand. Canada, the United States, India, Pakistan. Ghana, Sierra Leone and Nigeria is the son of Britain's former Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden, an air force navigator whose plane was shot down three months before the war ended.

Last year, thieves stole 25 plaques which Dewar said were usually melted down to make carbon hrushes. So far this year six plaques have disappeared from the small concrete pedestals which stand in groups of several hundred on the clipped lawns.

Each plaque is worth 500 kyats (about $70) and comes from a workshop in Australia. None of the repleacements ordered has yet arrived.

Permitted by the Burmese authorities to have a gun. Dewar sat through several nights last year at the height of the robberies and after thieves stole parts of a tubewell compressor and most of the engine of his car. No one came. Undaunted, Dewar, a former engineering student and self-styled jack-ofall-trades successfully electrified the iron gate of his main store house and is now planning to electrify each of the more than 6.000 graveside plaques.

'irrevocable changes'

WASHINGTON, (LAT) - They came home to the crushing embrace of a nation in need of heroes, an America that showered them with yellow ribbons and ticker tape and an outpouring of emotion that both warmed and overwhelmed them. Nine months have passed. The ribbons are gone. The parades have stopped. What has happened to the 52 Americans who were beld hostage in Iran for 444 days? Where are they now? How are they and their families faring? And what are the lingering results of their detention?

Former Foreign Service officer Moorbead C. Kenoedy Jr. said he is a stronger, happier person than ever before and ex-charge d'affaires L. Bruce Laingen is said to be considering a race for the United States Senate from Maryland. On the other hand, Army Sgt. Dooald Hohman was sitting in a New Orleans restaurant eating a bowl of clam chowder during Mardi Gras when he burst into tears for no apparent reason. " I think that's when it dawned on me that it was time to reach out for some belp," he said.

And Marine Sgt. William Gallegos, out of work and out of morrey hack in his hlue-collar hometown of Pueblo, Colo., found his trouhles compounded by the baffling act of a perfect stranger who walked up to him in the street one day, asked to shake bis hand, then punched him in the mouth.

Thus, as the second anniversary of their capture on Nov. 4, 1979, approaches, interviews with hostages across the country and ahroad uncover this central fact: Some former hostages think they are doing well, while others grapple with serious problems. Almost all agree that they have been profoundly affected by the cataclysmic experience. Wherever events have since taken them, wbether to new careers or assignments or even to further misfortunes — many say that they and those around them have been irrevocable changed by the ordeal.

" It's never going to be behind me," former hostage Kevin Hermening said." It's part of my life

Los Angeles Times reporters interviewed 15 of the returned hostages. At least 25 others have specifically refused to be interviewed, so it cannot be determined how they are doing and how their status affects the overall picture of the entire group. But some rough statistics are available:

At least three former bostages have resigned from the Department of State, hut 25 others have remained in diplomatic or similar government service, including five who have taken overseas posts. Five of the military men have retired or heen discharged from the service, hut 10 others have taken new military assignments, including two who went overseas. Three hostages are on college fellowships: ahout a half dozen are writting books: two have gotten married and at least two have had their marriages break up.

It is impossible to blame the after-effects of the Iranian captivity on all situations, such as marital hreakups, which many mental health professionals say might have happened any-

Experts caution, too, that it is difficult to predict or analyze the impact of any stressful

" There is still an enormous amount to be learned about stress disorders and I believe we are only just scratching the surface," Dr. Stephen M. Sormenberg, a Washington psychiatrist who has studied this area for 13 years, said. "We still don't fully understand the relationship of earlier life experiences and personality development to the way a stressful event is experienced and processed. To attempt to generalize about the Iranian hostages is really an impossible task."

Yet, Sonnenberg said, if many of them are doing well, one reason could be the way they are treated upon their release. The reception received by the hostages, he noted, was different from that given returning Vietnam veterans, many of whom are now afflicted with a severe disorder known as delayed stress syndrome.

" There are three things we did not do for Vietnam veterans, which we did do for the hostages, " Sonnenberg said.

" First, they were kept together and given a chance to decompress as a group. Second, they were given a chance to discuss their experiences with trained medical and psychiatric personnel. Third, they got an enormous amount of public support and the opportunity to talk about what happened."

Air force Lt. Col. David M. Roeder, a former hostage oow assigned to the National War College at Fort McNair said: "The hardest adjustment I had was dealing with all the adulation and trihutes that I felt I didn't deserve," he said. "I didn't expect any reception when I got back. When I speak, I always try to make that point - don't look at us as beroes, hecause we're not. And not many of us think we are.

Hohman believes that the welcome-home might have had something to do with his outhurst in New Orleans. " It was one of the strangest things that ever happened in my life, crying without really knowing why," said the 39-year-old Army sergeant from West Sacramento, Calif., who is now stationed in Frankfurt, West Germany.

At the time, he and his German-born wife. Anna, were in New Orleans for the Mardi Gras, one of many parades, parties, free outings and trips, showered on the hostages after their return.

" I was like a kid who had too much ice cream and got a bellyache," he said. " My wife told me: " That's it. We're going home. You're tired. You need some rest.

Some hostages acknowledge feelings of guilt, especially because of the eight military personnel who died trying to rescue them. It's hard to hear that someone died for you, "Roeder said.

"Especially if you feel that it was your joh to die," added Alan Golacinski, who was an emhassy security officer. " It was very hard knowing I was going to be free and that these men had died for me - and that if anyone died, it should have been me." Such feelings have spurred many hostages

ing engagements to a special scholarship fund established for the children of the servicemen who died in the aborted rescue mission. Hohman said he no longer can deal with crowds and once had to leave the military commissary while shopping with his wife, "It was just too much," he said. "I had to go outside. Where they're packed — where it's bodies against bodies — I get very nervous. Maybe I remember how many bodies were outside that gate, screaming for our death while we were there in the embassy."

The embassy's consul general, Richard Morefield, moved his family from San Diego to Washington in July and now is assigned to a senior training post at the Department of State. His wife, Dorothea, said," I think he is remarkably free of symptoms," and Morefield attributed that to the fact he had a verbal outlet upon his release.

I knew the conventional wisdom was that it was good not to suppress - especially emohe said. "So I talked. I talked and talked. In fact, the most common physicaltrait we all shared after our release was laryngitis. We were talking constantly for bours on Another high-ranking embassy official, Moorhead C. Kennedy Jr., has left the Department of State to become director of the Peace Institute in New York. He calls his captivity" the best thing that ever happened

For the first time in my life, I was scared to death," he said. "None of the props you have in this world - rank, salary, intellect, eduation, family - are any help to you when you're about to be led out and shot. "It's a very lonely moment. You're thrown back on who you are. That's when you learn who you are. That's when you learn the props are dis-

Many of the former hostages, upon their return, found their relationships with their wives and children different. Not alway strained - but different.

Kennedy said, for instance, that" you have to re-learn those things that were once automatic. After years together, one may get up before the other automatically. But after a year apart, you may end up getting up at the same time - beading for the same destination. But we were both old enough to launch about it.

A more serious problem for Kennedy, he said, was re-establishing turf. His wife, Louisa, who had become a spokesman for many of the hostage families, managed the household - have everything else - while he was gone," I think he was anxious to take hack the responsibilities he'd had before that I had taken over, " Mrs. Kennedy said." Just the other day, he said: " We haven't sent in the morgage payment yet." And I said:
"Oh yes we did."

Kennedy recalled that" the first thing I did when I came home was rearrange all the furniture in the house. It was my way of asserting myself - that I lived here, too.

Barbara Timm, who made a highly publicized visit to her son, Kevin Hermening, while be was in captivity, has found herself battling depression.

You don't go through 14 months of conextreme emotional high, and then return to a normal keel," Mrs. Timm said. " I didn't do to well with it. I'm a different person than I was two years ago. Things I used to laugh at, I cry at now. At one point, I went for some professional help, but it's extremely expensive. All the time. I'm down in the dumps and depressed. I know it's there. I just don't knowwhat to do about it."

For the returnees, there were adjustment to be made with their children as well. Bruce German, for example, has to remind his three. offspring that he is there too when they automatically turn to their mother for an opinion - or permission to do something. One of Morefield's children learned how to drive while his father was in Iran." One night he was going out in the car and Dick crossexamined him," Mrs. Morefield said, laughing.

Besides insomnia, some returned hostages said they have had nightmares.

Kennedy said his recurring nightmare goes like this:" The State Department puts me on a plane and sends me back to Iran and the students are waiting on the other end. It's not the part about the students that gets to me it's that the State Department is sending me back. It may reflect a certain resentment that we were left out there, that the Sbah was admitted to this country without a reappraisal of the situation."

Some of the returned hostages also are hitter that the U.S. government, in an agree-ment signed at the time of their release, absolved Iran if financial claims by the captives. In fact, a dozen bave joined in a lawsuit filed in Los Angeles last Fehruary seeking $5 million in damages.

Several expressed anger at the proposal that they receive compensation of $12.50 for each day of captivity, in addition to their regular pay. At least one is unhappy about his treatment upon his release.

People didn't know what to do with me when I got to Germany," said Jerry Plotkin, the only hostage not employed overseas by the U.S. government. "... I became a second-class citizen,"

Even as the former hostages try to get on with their lives, there are things that won't let them forget.

I got a letter from one of those clowns, said Col. Charles W. Scott, who retired from the Army in May. " Do you believe it? One of those students wrote to me. It was a friendly little letter, in broken English, telling me he thought of me often. And I answered

All of them say they are somehow changed. The things that scare you in life are not so scray anymore," Kennedy said. " All that worry about how I was getting on in the world - when I came out, it didn't seem to matter anymore. It was a liberation from fear."

William Gallegos, 23, now out of the Marine Corps, cannot find work. His money: is running out and he is on the verge of losing his apartment. Someone vandalized his car.

Kazimiroff, who has taken over her father's practice in the Bronx community aod the Bronx Zoo, is " working on a couple of projects with rodents and other small mammals. The rodents have incissors that continually grow and, for whatever the reason may be, they don't wear them down (in captivity]. So we're developing a program to trim the incissors and, since some of them only have a mouth opening of a half-inch, it makes working difficult. I decided that this was something that was important enough to me that I wanted to do it on a regular basis," said Grillo, resting in a zoo hospital corridor after belping

"I come up bere every week and spend a day," said Grillo. "I've always been interested in animals and animal hushandry. They know a lot at the zoo and there is a 'tremendous variation in everything, in the animal behavior, in the kinds of diseases the animals get. But underneath it all, " said the surgeon. " there are just some very hasic things, ways of approaching given diseases, given symptoms and given patients. What I like to do is approach a problem from a common-sense point of view, not just from

One of the things that attracts Grillo to his avocation is the similarity between buman medicine and veterinary medicine. "You'd be amazed how many kiods of thought pro-cesses are completely similar." he said. " An approach to the animal cao be an interesting way of comparison, but it can also reinforce your own knowledge of how you think about disease processes.

Like Kazimiroff, Grillo considered a career in veterinary medicine. " But the main problem I had was I didn't want to approach veterinary school or medical school as a way of learning at the expense of some animal that

A prospective student who would not become involved in sacrificing animals for study, Grillo found, is not a suitable candidate for a school of veterinary medicine. " I ran into trouble at medical school because I wouldn't do animal labs. They weren't very tolerant of that, hut at least I got through it."

Claussen first came in contact with the zoo's bospital when she toured it with a group of her Columbia students." I've been coming bere for IO years," says Claussen, whose specialty is parasitology.

"These parasites just don't read the books," said Claussen, "they just don't know what they're supposed to be, so you work it out. I swear, when you're working on these things you just throw the book away. because you know that the guy wbo wrote the book just had some scissors and some " and little working knowledge of parasites in the real world.

"These animals come from all over the world, some of them have never been studied before, and yet the identity (of parasites infecting them) is necessary so medication can be administered to save the animal and prevent possible transmission to other animals. They defy the imagination," she said.

Electronics tracks, eliminates rats

SANTA ANA, California (AP) - Rats with tiny radio transmitters mounted on collars are leading bealth officials on an electronic chase which, officials hope, will help cut a rising rodent population. The little roof rats, scientifically known as rattus rattus, are carrying transmitters weighing three to four grams, so their every move can be studied. Orange County vector control manager Gil Challet said. Evetually health officials hope to perfect methods of trapping and poisoning the crea-

"We will be tracking just four rats in the same residential area," he said. "We will follow only one this week, tracking it for 24 hours a day. Then next week we will put a transmitter on another rat and track it in the same manner. Challet and Dr. Tony Recht, a zoologist who teaches at California State University-Dominguez Hills, want to know where the rats spend their time, when they are active and how far they travel, Challet

"We have literature on that hut it is not exactly right," he said." We want to know if they will go from block to block instead of living on just one block.

Some rats will be used to test poison baits. made of paraffin, corc meal, powdered sugar and an anti-coagulant that makes the rats hleed to death internally.

"We want to find how long they wait before taking our poison bait and how they deal with it," he said. The roof rat, which feeds on such foods as oranges, avocados and walnuts, has been multiplying rapidly in Orange County residential areas where foliage has grown np. Neighborhoods reaching 10 to 20 years old are offering a habitat for these rats,

No accurate population count can be made, but vector control official Fred Beams estimates there are 2 million rats in " In 1975, there were 1,300 complaints.

In 1980 there were 6,000 and we project 7.000 complaints for 1981," he said. Challet bopes the new program will be more successful than some past efforts. In June, Recht caught several rats, put radio collars on and released them in suhurban garhage dumps. We sent them out in the garbage trucks and they all died about five minutes after they arrived," Challet said." They're nocturnal animals and hate the sunlight. The first thing they did was to scurry under the first available cover. Then they got squisbed by trash compactors and hulldozers.

It made an awful electronic beep when

LONDON BOMB SCENE: Kenneth Howorth of Brackhell, Berkshire, a civilian working for the Metropolitan Police bomb disposal squad died trying to defuse the IRA bomb which caused this damage. In the 12 years since the bombs began to go off in Northern Ireland there have been no busier bomb disposal units than those of the British Army, since 1970 they have neutralized 292,000 pounds of high explosives and 17 experts have died.

AQUATIC PROPULSION: Left, there are some hazards related to wind-power as the sailors here prove when their boat capsized off St. Petersburg, Florida and were unable to right it. Right, a porpoise called 'Flip' pulls a boy and his boat at the Miami Seaquarium.

MODERN ELEVATORS: A ramp is not always a practical proposition for a disabled person, so, above left, a scissor lift by Becker provides easy access where an obstacle previously existed. Center, a rack and pinion driven climbing work platform called the Aliclimber runs on steel lattice masts fixed to the building and can be as high as 52 feet. Right, elevated parking enables two cars to park in one space.

ICING TESTS: The helicopter at the left is entering a water spray produced at the right to determine how fast ice will build up on its rotor blades and other surfaces in Ottawa, Canada. In cold weather, the spray rig provides a beavy ice build-up in a short time, information obtained from the tests will be used to design systems which will allow craft to fly into icing conditions.

KIELDER DAM: The largest man-made lake in Europe is now nearing completion in north east England. The dam is 1140 meters long and 52 meters above river bed level with a storage capacity of 188 million cubic meters of water. The water from this dam will meet water shortages throughout a large area nearby.

1. This is one of those cases where you can assure the contract regardless of how the North-South cards are divided. Win the club lead with the ace, draw trumps, and cash the A-K-Q of diamonds, discarding your club loser. Then, after ruffing dummy's queen of clubs, lead the three of hearts.

If North follows low or shows out, play the heart ten from dummy. If and when South wins with the jack or queen of hearts, he cannot avoid making a losing return. Whatever his holding, he must either give you a ruff and discard or lead a heart. If his. original heart holding is, say! Q-J-9-6 and he returns the six. you play your eight to assure the contract. If he returns the nine, jack or queen of hearts, you play your four and again guarantee the contract.

If, on your lead of the three of hearts, North produces the jack or queen, you assure the slam by either letting him win the trick, or by winning the jack or queen with the ace and returning the heart deuce from dummy, planning to finesse the eight if South follows low. 2. Play your eight of clubs on the king. If North shifts to any. other suit, you automatically acquire an entry to dummy that assures at least nine tricks. If North continues with the A-Q of clubs, play your 10-9! North still can't lead another suit or you'd make four notrump, so he's now forced to lead his seven of clubs - on which you play your carefully preserved six! North is then at the end of his rope; whatever he leads, you win the remaining tricks.

If you were to play your six. of clubs on the ace, king or queen, you could wind up going down one against good defense. You could not be sure of making more than eight government has said it finished the 1981 financial year with a higher than expected budget deficit of $ 57.9 hillion.

A few hours later the Reagan administration announced that it would have to borrow heavily in the private markets between now and next spring to keep the government running. The news was not expected to please the New York money and stock markets which have been skittish in recent months about the size of government deficits and the amount of money the treasury will have to borrow.

Last spring, the Reagan administration predicted that the budget deficit for the financial year ending Sept. 30 would be $54.9 billion. In July, it raised that estimate to $55.6 billion.

But Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Budget Director David Stockman said in a joint statement that the deficit actually amounted to $57.9 billion. The larger deficit came about mostly because the government did not take in as much in business taxes as it

Boeing earns $90m profit

SEATTLE, Oct. 29 (R) - Boeing, the world's largest aircraft manufacturer, said that a fall in aircraft orders pushed its third-quarter earoings down by 34 percent from the same period last year.

Boeing said difficulties in the airline industry, with major airlines hit by the recession is expected to cause losses of $1.1 billion this year and bave led to reduced orders for its 727 and 747 jets. It said orders were likely to remain low until 1983 when its new 757 and 767 intermediate-range jets become available. The company said profits fell to $92.5 million from $139 million last year. Boeing said continued costs for research and development of its new aircraft also cut into earnings for the period.

Yen seen topping world currencies

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AFP) - The yen could next year become the world's stronges1 currency, better placed than the Swiss franc and deutsche mark, Rainer Gut, an executive from the Credit Suisse Bank, said here Thursday,

Gut, who was attending an international monetary seminar, said the yen was likely to appreciate partly because crude oil rates expected to remain stable would help Japan, and partly because of Japan's low inflation of some four percent.

recession apparently sapped corporate profits over the last few months, thereby cutting down the government's take on those profits. Hours after Regan wand Stockman announced the deficit figure, officials at the treasury department held a news briefing to announce that the government would have to borrow considerably between now and next March.

Under-Secretary Beryl Sprinkel said the treasury would have to borrow $26.75 billion through the end of this year and another $29 to $32 billion during the first three months on

In another development, the United States' foreign trade deficit narrowed to-$2.6 billion in September as the lagging U.S. economy slowed demand for imported goods. U.S. Commerce Department officials said Wednesday.

JEDDAH, Oct. 29 - Member states of the Organization of the Islamic Conference have agreed on a comprehensive program of action to strengthen cooperation in the field of food and agriculture. This was decided at the recently concluded Islamic Conference of Ministers of Food and Agriculture which was beld in Ankara and attended by over 30 OIC members and observers from international and regional organizations.

The meeting was inaugurated by Turgut Ozal, minister of state and deputy premier of Turkey, who emphasized exchange of technology among Islamic countries in the agricultural sector, establishment of regional reserve stocks to meet the current deficiency in the food sector, and adoption of long-term trade arrangements, especially in support of joint ventures. Other speakers at the forum similarly emphasized these themes and urged attainment of self-sufficiency in food and agriculture for OIC member states.

OIC Secretary General Habib Chatti in his speech remarked that all conditions necessary to realize self-sufficiency objectives exist in the economies of OIC members and they should aim to solve the problem of food shortage by specializing in food production at sub-regional and national level. He also stressed the necessity of adopting a new development strategy to combat the problems of poverty and malnutrition that afflict a number of OIC member states.

The prime minister of Turkey, Bulent Ulusu, attended the closing session of the conference at which a comprehensive resolution was adopted by the ministers of agriculture for raising agricultural production, ROME, Oct. 29 (AFP) - The World Food Program (WFP) had an almost shamefaced look about it Thursday, after its executive committee rejected a $5 million aid plan for Viemam.

The United States led a group of donor countries that also included Canada, West Germany, Britain, Japan and Thailand in opposing the plan. The rejection surprised most delegations and experts who expected a compromise to emerge at the last minute. A French-inspired decision was reached to postpone the matter until next spring.

Financial Roundup

Dollar tastes mixed fortunes

JEDDAH, Oct. 29 — The dollar had mixed fortunes on the European exchange markets Thursday with the American currency holding its a ground overall. Some determined European central bank interventions Wednesday and Thursday, pushed the dollar down, but with Europdollar deposits still remaining firm, the dollar's fall on the exchanges was limited. Federal Reserve "Fed funds" prime lending rates fluctuated in New York between 14% to 14% percent and closed at lower level Wednesday night.

On the bullion markets, Thursday saw gold prices fall back to $423 per ounce levels, once the Polish strike situation had unravelled itself.

With more Bundesbank support for the German mark, that currency gained some ground to trade at 2.2940 levels Thursday, after it had reached the 2.3100 levels by mid-week. Bundesbank support was not particularly heavy — within the range of $20 million sales — but the timing was tought to be right since the markets were already taking steps to cut back on their long-dollar positions. The French franc, unlike the mark, was still volatile at 5.7580 levels Thursday, while the Japanese yen did not cover much lost ground, trading at 235.50 levels.

In other currency news, the Swiss franc also lost some ground to trade at 1.9005 compared to 1.8910 levels Wednesday closing markets, while sterling moved within the range of 1.8200 — 1.8193 levels. This can be said to be an improvement for sterling since the British currency bad been experiencing wide swings of as much as two cents during the past week. Higher U.K. interest rates were still the major attraction for foreign investors, with British interest rates now reaching nearly 16 percent for overoight funds and 16\% - 16\% percent for the one-year period.

Eurodollar deposit rates are not that much far off from other key European currency rates. For example, one-year rates are now quoted at 161/2 - 165/8 percent - not much different from sterling rates and are exactly the same as French franc rates. As such, the dollar's recent rise has to be explained by factors other than some interest differentials favoring the dollar. Recent Polish uncertainties could be a major reason, but the markets are also looking at long-term trends and what they see is a picture emerging that shows long-term U.S. dollar interest rates as rising.
On the local markets, riyal rates fell back slightly from morning opening levels, but long-term deposits remained firm. One month JIBOR rates opened at 131/2 - 14 percent, but later fell back to 13 - 131/2 percent in thin trading. The six and 12month rates were quoted at 143/4 - 151/4 percent on opening, but they had remained at these levels by close of business Thursday. Week-fixed deposits were now dealing at 11 — 12 percent compared with 12 — 13 percent last Tuesday. The overall picture, bowever, still shows a relatively firm rival deposit rate base. BONN, Oct. 29 (R) — The West German cabinet has cut 200 million marks ($87 million) from next year's defense budget to help trim a big new federal budget deficit, government spokesman Kurt Becker said.

The decision, taken after heated debate. means defense spending will now grow by 3.8 percent in 1982 instead of the planned 4.2 percent in nominal terms. Before the latest cut. West Germany planned to spend 43.8 billion marks ($18.8 billion) on defense.

Defense Ministry officials conceded last summer there would be no real growth in military spending when inflation was taken into account, despite Bonn's commitment to a NATO target of a three percent real increase. The new cuts appeared to make a decline in real defense expenditure inevitable and could cause friction with the defenseminded Reagan administration.

Asked if Defense Minister Hans Apel bad agreed to the move, a spokesman told reporters: "He took note of the cabinet's decision after a hard debate." Apel bad prevented plans by the government coalition to carve even more from the defense budget, his

Thatcher wins no-confidence move

LONDON, Oct. 29 (AFP) - The Conservative government won a vote of confidence on its policy against unemployment by a margin of 62 votes Wednesday night.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's margin of victory exceeded the Conservatives best hopes, and showed the party had solidly voted against the no-trust motion. Nevertheless, she was harshly criticized by some of her own back-benchers during the six-and-ahalf-bour debate.

Labor Party leader Micbael Foot opened the debate on the motion of no confidence submitted by his party. He outspokenly criticized the government's austerity policy. He called for "reflation" through a big increase in public spending. It was the fifth noconfidence motion defeated since Mrs. $517 million. The company said it had higher overseas profits from oil and natural gas production and exploration, but had weaker earnings from foreign refining and market-

Thatcher took office in 1979. The no-confidence motion stated that the government's economic policies "have" pushed the registered total unemployed people to sbameful levels, have dealt a series of most damaging blows to British industry, and offer no hope of recovery."

But Mrs: Thatcher offered no new measures to satisfy critics. She affirmed categorically, on the contrary, that there was no quesnon of altering by an iota a policy that was, she said beginning to hear fruit.

She cited improved productivity, and as regards strikes, noted that the number of disputes over the past two years was lower than any comparable period since the war years of the 1940s.

Squabbles over cash blur EEC's vision

BRUSSELS, Oct. 29 (R) - After more than a year of negotiations among the 10-member states over what was billed as an attempt at the most fundamental reform of the EEC in its history, the wider issues have largely become submerged in a squabble about cash.

In the words of one senior official. "It's about who pays what and who gets what from the community's $25 billion annual budges. That is a long way from the vision of EEC Commission President Gaston Thorn who has prepared a comprehensive strategy to modernize the European Economic Community, founded 24 years ago when Europe was still healing the wounds of World War II.

Given a mandate in May 1980 to overhaul the EEC's budget Thorn's 14-member executive has produced an avalanche of plans to boost the community's role in Europe's economic and social life. New joint industrial, energy, employment and regional policies are among the many proposals sent to EEC capitals in the past few months.

Thorn has also called for resolute action to break down trade barriers between member states and create the genuine common market in goods and services. which the signatories to the treaty of Rome envisaged. The plans have generally been received with approval by member states. But, according to senior EEC officials and diplomats here, they bave been quietly elbowed aside while governments thrash out the issue of cash. Exhausted by endless rounds of bargaining at ministerial, ambas-sadorial and expert levels, many diplomats here are looking to next month's summit of EEC leaders as 'make or break' for the community's future.

Britain, which currently bolds the sixmonthly presidency of the EEC, has said it wants the basis of an accord hammered out at the London meeting.

It was Britain's split with its EEC partnets last year over hefty net payments to the community budget which provoked the reform process, and it is anxious to put a permanent limit on its contributions. "The mandate is designed to make sure that member states pay into the community on the basis of their ability - lo ensure an equitable share-out," said one British offi-

Among the richest EEC states, West

Germany is prepared to remain a major contributor to community coffers, but it wants guarantees that its payments will not continue to rise. Last summer, the Bonn government vetoed artempts by the EEC Commission to boost spending on industrial and social policies next year when it led a fierce attack on the executive's draft budget

West Germany wants other wealthy countries like the Netherlands and Denmark to contribute a bigger sbare to EEC finances. France, which earlier this month launched its own plan for a European revival, has criticized Britain for taking a 'money grubbing' approach to community affairs.

President Mitterrand's government sees Thorn's mandate as a chance to rebuild Europe as a major economic power and challenge the dominance of the United States and Japan. But French officials have also been quick to defend the community's costly Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) which Britain believes lies at the root of the budgetary problems.

Guaranteed prices and export subsidies for the Common Market's eight million farmers have in recent years taken up to 70 percent of all EEC spending and led to mounting community food surpluses.

Moskovskaya Pravda complained about the leniency sbown to dozens of persons caught up in what was described as a major racket in the Soviet capital.

The drivers over-ordered fuel and sold excess amounts to filling-station attendants, who in turn had a network of customers among private car drivers.

The newspaper said film was secretly taken of those involved in the racket, but the only outcome was that one attendant was sacked six faced criminal charges and 60 others were transferred to other stations.

The continuing labor unrest followed a one-hour national strike Wednesday ealled by the Solidarity Independent trade union in protest against food shortages and alleged government inaction on various issues.

The authorities condemned the strike Thursday in statements and commentaries in daily newspaper Trybuna Ludu suggested that those responsible should be brought to account,

This could be one of the subjects to be raised Friday at a session of the Sejm (parliament) whose members will be asked to consider formally outlawing strikes, informed sources said.

Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski said that after Wednesday's strikes it was up to the Sejm to decide on such matters and if Solidarity continued its present course other more far-reaching decisions would become necessary.

He was addressing the party's central committee, which decided that Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski should retain the jobs of prime minister, defense minister and party leader.

"The decision was taken with an eye to possible complications in the country's political and socio-economic situation in a matter of weeks or months due to actions by the opponent," the official news agency PAP

It quoted another senior politburo member. Stefan Olszowski, as saying the measure was obviously transitional. Another army general was brought into the polithuro during a central committee meeting Wednesday, reflecting the growing role of the military in crisis-tom Poland. Troops have been out in force across the country since Monday, mainly helping with the day-to-day running of the economy.

But the independent-minded Warsaw newspaper Zycie Warszawy said Thursday that no amount of supervision by troops and police could keep prices from soaring on the hlack market. In a report on prices at Warsaw's Rozycki Bazaar it said storebolders bad immunized themselves against police and army raids, controls, fines, trials and confiscations.

"While paying full respect to the police and soldiers one bas to acknowledge that there is only one remedy against the black market — well supplied shops," Zycle Warszawy said.

Construction workers in the Baltie port of Szczecin staged a two-hour protest Thursday over shortages of material and planned to discuss further strike action next week, unlon sources said. Sinkes affecting nundreds of thousands of workers continued in Tarnobrzcg, Zrardow, Sandomiez and Zielona Gora.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency Tass quoted a Polish labor leader Thursday as saying many workers were quitting the Solldarity trade union and returning to progovernment labor groups.

Longin Kolaczynski, bead of the pro-Communist branch union for seamen and dockers, was interviewed by the agency after a tour of Soviet black sea ports, "Many of our members who had earlier been misled by the demagogy of the petty politicians in Solidarbroken with its anti-people, anti-Soviet line and are now returning to their trade unions," Kolaczynski said.

Typhus breaks out in Baltic city

WARSAW, Oct. 29 (AFP) - A vaccina tion campaign has been launched against a typhus outbreak in the Baltie port elty of Gdansk, the Health Ministry's sanitary inspection service reported Thursday.

The service — contradicting claims made Thursday in Paris - said only 15 cases of the disease had been reported, all in a specific part of the city. It added that all 15 had been hospitalized and were receiving appropriate treatment and drugs, and that they did not expect the illness to spread. They said a sbortage of hygiene products prohably caused the outbreak.

The report was at variance with a claim in Parishy the Medecins Sans . Frontieres (doctors without frontiers) Organization, which characterized the outbreak as an epidemic for which there was an inadequate supply of drugs.
The group, quoting health sources in Poland's independent Solidarity union federation, also said the entire country was suffering from a "serious lack of medicines and hospital equipment."

"Numerous health services are at present paralized and doctors find the greatest difficulty in carrying out even the most urgent treatment," the organization said in a statement. "Some operating theaters have been forced to close down hecause of a lack of surgical gloves, syringes and handages," the statement added.

The organization said that drugs and equipment had been sent to Tosun hospital, 200 kms west of Warsaw, and other truckloads were ready to leave for Poland.

He said in statement that the U.S. looks forward to more cooperation with Saudi Arahia, in order to realize a number of extremely vital objectives for the two countries, the Middle East and the whole world.

Murphy also referred to President Reagan's statement after the voting, in which he said that the result of the voting has given an evidence that the Middle East peace issue is making progress once again, although there was still much to do for the realization of peace and stability in the region.

not a result of White House pressure because "the merits of the sale stood on their own." But some senators seemed skeptical of this claim. Senator John Glenn, who voted against the sale, heavily criticized Reagan's efforts as "political blackmail." Glenn opposed what he said were Reagan's efforts to promise individual senators that he would support their "pet projects" in return for their AWACS support.

But whether or not Reagan used such bargaining tactics made little difference in the end, because the sale passed and Reagan chalked up another astounding political victory. He never gave in to congressional pressure to insist on a compromise with Saudi Arabia, and he always maintained a relaxed public posture when the pressure mounted for him to reverse congressional opposition

Good Morning

By Jihad Al Khazen

Once in Jeddah not long ago, I woke up one morning and looked around my house and realized suddenly it was as empty as a cave. Somehow I had never really given furniture much thought, and it was time I

Well, it was easy. Go to the office and cry a bit on our cashier's shoulder, then emerge smiling from ear to ear, greasy little paper bag staffed with riyals tucked securely under my arm. To the nearest furniture shop where I chose what I wanted, paid for it and left. As simple as

For once in Washington sometime after that, I woke up one morning and looked around my house and realized...Anyway, it was time for action and I made by arrangements and found the appropriate furniture hiring shop. This was only hiring, mind you, so it should have been even easier than huying, and as to financing well, I thought proudly. I've made my arrangements.

I looked around, then came back to the shop girl. "This and this and this and that and that..." But she cut me short: "How are you going to pay, sir?" "Why, cash on the nail, dear lady, cash on the nail."

I thought that by this I had uttered the magic word. But I bad done no such thing, apparently. The lady turned distinctly cool, looked me up and down and said, 'Sorry, credit cards only. We never take cash." Now this was my cue to turn cool as well. "Cards stand for cash," I said, trying to give my tone a flavor of weary disdain. Cards stand for cash, and I am offering you the cash itself. It's to your advantage, ultimately, as I will be only too happy to explain to your manager — and I promise I'll keep it simple..." (I thought I might have overplayed my hand a bit bere, and I wasn't wrong!)

"They can also stand on their head and whistle through their nose, if you like, but that's what we'll take and nothing else," she said evenly, looking at me straight in the eye.

Weary disdain turned to weary resignation - ever the fate of the truth seeker in this realm of error - and I took my wallet out, "Here you are," I said, my face averted. "Here are several kinds of wretched cards. Pick one and let's get it over with..."

She riffled them through, then handed them back. "These are European cards. Not negotiable here. And we do have other customers, you know, so if you'll excuse me..." Disdain, resignation and now sheer alarm. The prospect of going back to an empty bome loomed large. Besides, bonor bad somehow got

"I'll pay a year's rent in advance," I pleaded. "Just hand me the furniture." "Year's rent?" She knew I was beaten. Only a matter of a "mopping-up operation" now. "A year's rent? The stuff is worth ten times that much at least, so if you decide to...' By then I was well on my way out ... I had my pride after all, and I didn't want to hear her spell the situation ont: "So if you decide to abscond with the stuff to Philadelphia, and you with nothing to your name in the way of valid credit card.."

There you are ... a thief, a vagabond and goodness knows what else ... and all I did was proudly to offer cash on the nail ... Translated from Asharq Al -Awsat

Haig, Huang discuss arms sales

Incertainties seen in N-war

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)- U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig met Thursday with Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua in the first of a series of "intense consultations' that the Reagan administration hopes will ease Peking's concerns ahout U.S. relations with the republic of China.

Huang is the first ranking Chinese official to visit Washington since Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping toured the United States in 1979. Haig and other U.S. officials greeted Huang at the State Department. They went immediately to Haig's office for the first of several meetings planned during Huang's two-day visit.

Huang was conferring later Thursday with Vice-President George Bush at the White House, and plans to meet with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. A second meeting is scheduled with Haig Friday.

The administration hopes Huang's visit to end Chinese concerns about U.S. arms sales

Chinese opposition to the sales is holding up further improvement in U.S.-Chinese relations, including the first U.S. arms deals with the Peking government.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said prospects for U.S. arms sales to China will be discussed during Huang's visit, and one official who asked not to be identified said the administration bad prepared for "intense consultations" in an effort to clarify the Washington-Taipei weapons relations to China's satisfaction.

Arms sales to Taipei have been virtually non-existent since Reagan took office. Although the administration has not taken a decision on whether to go ahead with weapons deals, a State Department official said that Taipei, shouldn't expect too much.

"We believe it is essential to examine every request by Taipei carefully, prudently and on the hasis of actual need, Fischer said, adding that the administration was "fully aware of the sensitivities on the subject."

The statement didn't constitute a change in the U.S. policy of selling arms to Taipei for sophisticated FX jet fighters, but action on that request has been postponed. Haig is known to want to keep any arms sales to Taipei to a minimum.

For peace conference N. Yemen said backing Soviet call tion Organization (PLO). At a dinner in President Saleb's bonor Tuesday night, Soviet President Leonid Brezhney vigorously urged other states to consider the scheme. He said it was time to renew efforts toward a peace agreement because tensions in the Middle East were rising.

The joint communique, issued by the official Tass news agency, said North Yemen also supported Soviet proposals for a demilitarized zone in the Indian Ocean and the Gulf. The statement indicated that Moscow had promised to deliver more arms to North Yemen, saying that the two sides had agreed to broaden and perfect cooperation in economic and military fields.
